Court Sustains Death Sentence Of Hauptmann

N.J. Tribunal Rules Trial in Lindbergh Murder Entirely Proper.

Little Hope Left For German's Life

Legal Moves Open Hold Scanty Promise for Escaping Chair.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 9.—The death sentence imposed on Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the kidnap-murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., was upheld unanimously today by the Court of Errors and Appeals, leaving him only three very doubtful avenues of escape from the electric chair.

Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard will fix a new execution date for Hauptmann and unless his lawyers successfully pursue one of the three courses open the stoical German carpenter will pay the penalty decreed at Flemington by a jury of eight men and four women.

The thirteen members of the court who voted to sustain the Flemington verdict swept aside every one of the legal points raised by Hauptmann's counsel, held that the trial was legally proper in every respect and concluded that the verdict was "one to which the evidence inescapably led."

For the first time since he was arrested in the Bronx on September 19, 1934, Hauptmann today maifested emotion approximating despair. His present chief of counsel, C. Lloyd Fisher, broke the new to him in the death house.

"I never did this and surely they will find that out before it is too late," Hauptmann told Fisher. His first words, though, indicated a regard for the feelings of his wife, Anna:

Wedding Date Tomorrow.

"My God, what a fine anniversary present for Anna," he exclaimed. The Hauptmanns will have been married ten years tomorrow.

After the first shock, prison officials said, Hauptmann quickly recovered his customary calm and relaxed in the cell, the walls of which are liberally plastered with pictures of his wife and son, Mannfried.

Late today, Egbert Rosecrans, defense counsel, said the case probably will be appealed to the Supreme Court. Fisher recently said new evidence had been uncovered, a circumstance which might merit a new trial. Rosecrans, however, said:

"I don't believe we have grounds now for a new trial. We can go to the United State Supreme Court, however, because a ruling was made on the constitutional questions. We can also go before the board of pardons, but I think we will appeal to the Supreme Court first. The Court of Pardons can commute a sentence to life imprisonment, but does so rarely.

Rosecrans said he will confer this week with Fisher and Frederick A. Pope, the third defense attarney.

"Proofs" Cited.

Sixteen members of the full court were on the bench when the decision was announced, but Justice Trenchard and two new lay judges had no voice in the case. Trenchard, as trial judge, was automatically barred from the deliberations; the other judges were appointed after the appeal on June 20.

The opinion was written by Supreme Court Justice Charles Parker, 73-year-old member of the court. It was nearly 14,000 words in extent and was preceded by a syllabus, noting briefly the 16 points raised by the defense

"Our conclusion," the opinion read, "is that the verdict is not only not contrary to the weight of the evidence, but one to which the evidence inescapably led. * * *

"From three different, and in the main unrelated sources, the proofs points unerringly to guilt, viz: (a) Possession and use of the ransom money; (b) the handwriting of the

Farmer Admits Drowning Two Step-Daughters

Tries to Shoot Self When Police Break Into Hotel Hideaway.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Oct. 9.—After prolonged questioning, the office of Chief of Detectives John Carroll announced today that Ferrin Rowland, arrested here earlier in the day, had admitted killing his two small step-daughters in Michigan two weeks ago.

The two girls had been drowned in a small lake after a part of a broken plow-share had been tied to thenr necks to weight the bodies.

The prisoner was arrested here today at the request of Michigan authorities.

Girls Missing Two Weeks.

The two children, Katherine Woodin, 6, and Virginia, 2, disappeared from their home at Harrison, Mich., two weeks ago with Rowland.

Officers said Rowland attempted to shoot himself when they arrested him in a hotel room here, where he had been traced through letters to Michigan. As they entered the room, they said, he pulled a small revolver from underneath his shirt

Man Enters Wife's Home, Kills Himself

Samuel Armor Found by Estranged Mate on Her Return.

Had Set Stage With Mementos Before He Took Gas.

Samuel W. Armor, 50, of 203 Kentucky avenue southeast, yesterday pried his way into his estranged wife's apartment, set the scene for a dramatic suicide and took his own life.

At some time in the afternoon, according to police, Armor, equipped with a wrench, auto grease gun, screw driver and a brace and bit, forced his way into the apartment at 731 Eighth street southeast—where he had been living with his wife, Mrs. Vera Elizabeth Armor, until they were separtaed three months ago.

Making his way to a storage room where trunks were kept, he pried the lid off one otf them, dug out his marriage certificate and license, the title to an automobile, several pictures of himself and one of his wife's child by her first marriage.

Tacks Record on Wall.

On the auto title he wrote:

"My wife ought to have this; she paid for it."

Then, as police reconstruct his movements, he climbed a couch in the living room, tacked his marriage certificate as high up on the wall as he could reach.

On the top of it he wrote:

"For better or for worse."

On the side he scribbled:

"Goodbye, Sambo."

Sambo was his wife's pet name for him.

Sets Pictures in Circle.

The marriaget license he laid on the sofa. The pictures of himself he placed all around the coffee table; the one of his wife's child, he laid face down.

With the wrench he ripped out the plug on the gas jet. Then he lay on the couch.

When his wife came home from work she found her husband sprawled on the floor. Police and the fire rescue squad worked on the prostrate man for 25 minutes before pronouncing him dead.

Armor and his wife first met 15 years ago, the wife told Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald. At that time Armor was a chauffeur at the Japanese Embassy. He served in the Army during the World War. His last occupation was driving a taxicab. Dr. MacDonald issued a suicide death certificate.

Mother Welcomes Blood Test Of Child to Show Paternity

Justice Adkins Orders Examination Be Made; Is First of Kind for District Courts; Federal Expert Skeptical.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Central figure in Washington's most-talked-of divorce case, a blue-eyed, 21-year-old girl yesterday told reporters she believed in blood tests.

In the spotlight after her husband questioned the paternity of one of her two children, the mother, Lois Leonard Kessler, former Eastern High School student, talked glibly of life, love, romance, blood tests, co-respondents and alimony.

Hostess in a Connecticut avenue tap room, Mrs. Kessler told reporters her stormy married life culminated in separation because of doubts in the mind of her husband, James B. Kessler, jr., 24, Rural Resettlement Administration employe.

The blood examination, rare in the annals of American jurisprudence and without precedent in Washington, was ordered yesterday by Justice Jesse C. Adkins in District Supreme Court.

After husband and wife argued bitterly over the identity of the father of James B. Kessler 3d, intervention by men of science was proposed by John R. Reed, the husband's lawyer.

Husband Agrees.

Adkins acquiesed. The judge suggested those concerned should decide on the man to study the blood of the infant, its mother and her husband. Otherwise, the court ruled, the appointment will be made without regard to the wishes of counsel.

Meanwhile, exhibit A, little Jimmy, primarily concerned with his own gayety, smiled and crawled and smiled some more at St. Ann's Infant Asylum, Twenty-third and K streets northwest.

Reed and Raymond Neudecker, attorney for the wife, indicated they expected to agree on a physician to perform the tests despite objections of Mrs. Kessler to selection of Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, the first biologist suggested.

"I won't let Dr. Hunter touch me because Reed knows him," she said. "They've tried to plot against me all along."

She added her husband first questioned the parentage of her son while she still was an expectant mother. They were separated March 19, 1934, and the child was born December 6.

"The blood test was my idea in the first place," she confided. "I told him if he didn't think he was the father I would let a doctor decide it.

"No. That wasn't the only rea-

Feature Won By Vanderbilt Laurel Entry

Speed to Spare Is Victor by 5 Lengths; Stablemate Takes Second Place.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 9.—Leading the Nation in money winnings for the year, it was only fitting that the cerise and white colors of Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt's stable should dominate the running of today's feature race at Laurel. The sprint was for 2-year-olds foaled in Maryland and the winner was Speed to Spare. The son of Balko ran as his name implies, merely galloping over the finish line five lengths in advance of the closest horse, which was a stablemate, Balcony.

Had both Speed to Spare and Balcony failed, Cherry Stone, a third member of the Vanderbilt firm, might have been in the thick of the battle. However, Cherry Stone was not rushed in the stretch.

Third Money, all that was left for the other entries, was salvaged by The Hare, representing the Branncastle Farms. The Hare was little more than a tortoise during the early running but he showed some of the characteristics of his namesake in the stretch.

The victory of the Vanderbilt forces was anticipated and the payoff was $2.80.

As far as victory was concerned, Trainer Bud Stotler could have left two of the three horses in the barn, for Speed to Spare outran the field to the first turn, coasted along in

Egg Sale by Pound Endangers Michigan Housewives' Recipes

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Oct. 9.—Michigan housewives, scarcely recovered from six days of World Series baseball excitement, recoiled from a fresh shock today when they learned that after November 1 Michigan eggs will be sold by the pound—not by the dozen.

The order revolutionizing the egg-buying habits of the entire State populace came from the office of James F. Thomson, agricultural commissioner. He pointed out that after the change goes into effect dealers will have to grade their eggs according to size and quality.

"Housewives then will be able to get what they pay for," said the commissioner.

But the anguished wives who saw their favorite egg mixture recipes endangered, cried: "How many eggs in a pound?"

Commissioner Thomson had an answer for that, too.

He said a dozen ordinary eggs would average about 22 ounces and that the "jumbo" size laid would run about 26 ounces to the dozen. There will be four grades: fancy and grades A, B, C.

The cake bakers claim their plight is the worst. They want to know how many pounds of eggs to order for a recipe that calls for six eggs, or perhaps more if the recipe is for angel food cake.

A canvass of housewives revealed varying reactions, most of them agreeing they will have to learn all over again the rudiments of cooking by the pound.

And the storekeepers want to know: "How are we going to weigh up a pound of eggs? You can't bounce them on the scales like potatoes."

Both Nations Recall Help Il Duce Gave

Majority to Go Ahead With Sanction Plan Despite Protests.

Unanimous Agreement Not Necessary to Indict Rome.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Oct. 9.—Two of Italy's neighbors and sympathizers—Austria and Hungary—stepped forward tonight to throw a monkey wrench into League of Nations' machinery rolling toward sanctions against the Fascist nation.

These two voices rang out in defense of Italy in a strange twilight session of the League Assembly, which was adjourned suddenly without definite action.

League observers, however, expected an overwhelming majority of the 56 Assembly members to rally to the cause of sanctions at a critical session tomorrow.

Aloisi to Speak First.

The first speaker will be Baron Pompeo Aloisi, head of the Italian delegation. He is expected to denounce the action of the League Council in indicting Italy as an aggressor against Ethiopia and a violator of the Covenant.

Any other opponents of the Council's indictment then will be called upon to speak, with those who wish to make reservations for their governments.

Shortly after the opening of the historic meeting of the Assembly, which had been called into urgent session, Baron Emeric Pflugl, of Austria, announced to the tense delegates:

"Austria cannot forget that in a fateful moment of her history Italy contributed to safeguard her integrity. The links that bind the Austrian people to the people of Italy are strong. Austria will not fail in a friendship that is destined to last through time to come."

Refers to Nazi Putsch.

He referred to the Nazi putsch of July, 1934, when Chancellor Dollfuss was assassinated. Italy's army was moved to the frontier, ready to march into Austria should Nazi Germany attempt to take over the Vienna government.

Hungary took a similar position. Said Laszlo Develios, her delegate:

"Hungary hears with grief of measures about to be applied against Italy, which so frequently and effectively has shown its friendship toward Hungary."

Although the refusal of these nations to join in sanctions would be a vital aid to Italy, the majority of League members are expected to go ahead with their plan of exerting economic and financial pressure upon Mussolini's country.

A unanimous vote of the Assembly is not required. Any nation which refuses to approve the Council's indictment of Italy, however, is not compelled to join in the application of sanctions.

Tonight delegates eagerly asked whether Austria and Hungary would block the operation of sanctions against Italy. Some League officials sought to interpret the speeches as constituting reservations, rather than a disagreement

Levinsky-Gallagher Combat Lures 7,000 to Stadium Here

Marty Gallagher, the heavyweight hope of Foggy Bottom, and King Levinsky, erstwhile fish dispenser from Chicago, stepped into the fighting pit at Griffith Stadium last night to commit a scheduled ten rounds of modified assault and battery upon each other's persons before a crowd estimated at 7,000.

At the official weighing-in ceremonies yesterday afternoon, presided over by Chairman Kenneth Parkinson of the Boxing Commission, Levinsky recorded a neat 204½ pounds and Gallagher scaled 207.

Ray Arcel, noted trainer, who regularly nurses Lightweight Champion Barney Ross into his finest fighting fettle, made an eleventh-hour dash from Chicago to act as chief second for Levinsky in the bout which may determine his future in the ring.

Throughout yesterday the 8-to-5 odds in favor of the King, which have been offered all week, prevailed, with little if any Gallagher money available. In some quarters even money was being wagered that Levinsky would knock out Gallagher with one of his whoopla wallops, which have floored other fighters far more renowned than the Georgetown heavyweight.

The importance of last night's fight seemed to affect even the carefree Kingfish, who usually regards every opponent as just another sparring partner. Levinsky has been signed to meet the winner of the forthcoming Walter Meusel-Primo Carnera combat at Madison Suare Garden.

Gallagher, who had been in a prolonged retirement from the ring for a year, has steadfastly refused to emerge from his retirement until Levinsky could be coaxed into the squared circle with him.

Dolores Costello Retains Children; Elaine Barrie 'Scarcely Interested.'

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Oct. 9.—John Barrymore, who made a fortune making love, was at once divorced and separated from a good share of his wealth today by beauteous Dolores Costello.

Blue-eyed Miss Costello testified that Barrymore "made no effort to see me" after his escape from his protege, brunette Elaine Barrie, in a cross-country race.

The 53-year-old actor merely dashed in and out of Los Angeles—after eluding Miss Barrie at Kansas City—his wife, herself a former screen star, testified.

She said, however, arrangements had been made at the time for him to see their children, Dolores, 5, and John, 3, whose custody she won.

The 19-year-old Miss Barrie said in New York she was "not particularly interested" in the divorce.

"You just ask Mr. Barrymore if this makes any difference in our relations," she said. "Any answers must come from him."

A property settlement gave Miss Costello $850 a month and $163,000

Diredawa Junction Is Goal of Fascisti Drive to Cut Rail Link.

Defenders Resort To Guerilla War

Chemicals Used After Foes Fail to Break Ethiopian Line.

By H. R. Ekins.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Ethiopian Southern Field Headquarters Near Jijiga, by Courier to Harar, Oct. 9 (11 a. m.).—Heavy fighting started yesterday on the southern Ogaden front, where strong Italian columns under Gen. Rodolpho Graziani, invading Ethiopian Somaliland, attacked Ethiopian outposts in the fortified area of Garrahai and elsewhere.

The Ethiopian army admitted heavy losses and continued to affirm that the Italians are using gas and chemicals.

Object of the Italian drive apparently was a line through Jijiga and Harar to the important railway junction at Diredawa, which is approximately half way between Djibouti and Addis Ababa. If this rail point is captured and traffic stopped, Addis Ababa will be cut off from its only rail outlet to the sea, in French Somaliland, and Emperor Haile Selassie will have lost his chief route of supplies.

Bombing Is Imminent.

From what I am able to learn here—all Ethiopian reports are fragmentary and often of doubtful reliability—the bombing of this region by Italian planes appears an immediate probability and capture of Diredawa a matter of not more than ten days or so.

I reached the field headquarters of Dedjazmatch Nassibou here last night, despite an order that no civilians may approach the front, by the expedient of simply setting out with my translator and couriers and traveling over the caravan route from Harar. Once I was here there seemed to be no objection.

Dedjazmatch Habte Michaiel, commanding the defense of Garrahai (on some maps spelled Gorahai), radioed Nassibou reporting that the Italians, having failed to dislodge the Ethiopian defenses near the town, again had resorted to aerial chemical warfare.

Heavy Casualties Admitted.

The commander said the Italians, in addition to bombs and gas, were dropping a powdered chemical looking like sulphur, which was causing heavy casualties "among our warriors." The chemical burns the skin, causing blindness, and destroys the lungs, he said.

Nassibou said he had learned the Italians now are using 100-pound bombs, dropping an average of 400 daily on the Ogaden front. Airplanes were working in flight squadrons instead of groups of two or three.

The general asserted 50,000 Italians now are attacking along the whole Ogaden front. The largest Italian columns are storming Garrahai, which is not a city but a collection of mud forts and deep trenches extending over a wide wooded area.

The Ethiopian defense is chiefly guerrilla warfare. The men shoot from trees and positions behind stone barricades and flee into caves and trenches as the Italian planes approach.

Italians Use Chemicals.

Through my interpreter I questioned runners from the front who confirmed Nassibous' allegation that the Italians are using chemicals and gas bombs. Owing to the unfamiliarity of the natives with such weapons, however, it was impossible to determine the exact type of chemical attack.

The continuous reports of the bomb and chemical attacks obviously worried Nassibou and his staff. The officers pored over maps of the front lines in a little, tin-roofed, log-beamed, whitewashed room and were unusually grave. The boasting of a few days ago had disappeared.

It was a strange sight to see these wild chieftains, some of them attried in lion skins, brushing flies away with strips made of lion's manes, discussing the complicated terms of chemical warfare.

The runners who came in from time to time wore the typical native "shamm," a white robe over tight white trousers. They all had full cartridge belts and pistols. These men can cover more than 50 miles a day trotting barefooted over the mountain trails.

Anti-Aircraft Guns Posted.

Nassibou planed to push his headquarters nearer the center of combat today or tomorrow. He said the Italian thrust into Ogaden had failed to dislodge his outposts defending Jijiga and Harar, "but we are expecting more intensive air raids soon and we are making what preparations ars possible. We have a number of mobile anti-aircraft and machine guns posted on the mountain tops."

All military supplies, including ammunition and gasoline, were removed yesterday to hidden caves on the mountain sides.

Nassibou's head was bandaged because of an infected ear—ear infections seem common among the natives—but his energy is endless. His voice shook with rage as he described the alleged Italian chemical attacks.

"The Italians call us savages," he said, "but it is they who are resorting to the use of gas which apparently is their first contribution to the 'civilization' of Ethiopia."

Irregulars Shuffle By.

As we talked in a whitewashed hut where the general is living, long lines of irregulars shuffled by toward the front. The chieftains, clad in every conceivable sort of uniform, took talutes in a hurry, as they continually were scanning the skies for Italian bombers.

The floor of the room in which we sat was covered with "upindaf," a kind of native carpet, and there was one cheap, imported Axminister rug. A table and a few chairs were the only furniture. Outside a guard of barefoot soldiers chattered about their domestic problems—most of them have their wives with them—and debated such questions as the merit of shoes for soldiers and how to repair their old trade guns.

A bustling, bewhiskered adjutant ordered the dispatch of runners with orders to the front while other officers ordered the removal of entrenching tools.

There was great excitement over repeated reports of Italian chemical attacks. One runner reported Italian planes had just spread "poison powder" over a large area. He said the powder penetrated everywhere and was incapacitating hundreds of men.

The Ethiopian command was heartened by a message from Diredawa, important junction point on the Djibouti-Addis Ababa railway—saying 250 additional French white colonial troops had arrived to reinforce the railway guard. The men were lodged in a barracks near the French consulate. Nassibou hoped their presence would prevent Italian air raids on Diredawa and the severing of his line of communications with Addis Ababa.

Between You and Me

California Democrats Are Divided; Hiram Johnson and New Deal; Political Parade.

By Raymond Clapper

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Oct. 9.—Democrats are now theoretically in the majority in California. That is, they are ahead on the registration books. A few years ago the Democratic registration was about 400,000 in California. Now it is about 2,500,000, according to Culbert Olson, Democratic State chairman.

But that isn't the whole story. The Democrats are split up into factions, very bitter factions. Upton Sinclair's invasion of the party a year ago when he kidnaped the Democratic nomination for Governor is the cause of most of the trouble, although not all of it. So bitter were some of the conservative Democrats, like Hamilton Cotton, a big oil man and party sugar daddy, and Col. William H. Neblett, law partner of Senator McAdoo, that they bolted Sinclair and supported the Republican, Gov. Merriam.

In California there are Sinclair Democrats, who are deemed by old members of the party to be undesirable interlopers, a collection of socialists, Utopians, Townsendites, and other wild-eyed fringe groups.

Then there are McAdoo Democrats—including J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency; Postmaster H. B. R. Briggs, and in the main the Federal office-holding group, although the latest Federal appointee from California, George Acret, who went on the Guffey coal board, was employed in McAdoo's law office, he was a Sinclair man and ran for the State Supreme Court on the Sinclair ticket.

Lastly there are the old timers, the conservatives like Isidore Dockweiler and Justus Wardell, who bitterly dislike McAdoo. They were California Democrats when it was a lonesome life. Wardell ran against the McAdoor-supported candidacy of George Creel for the Democratic nomination for Governor last year, and refused to give way when it appeared that if he would throw his strength to Creel, they might beat Sinclair. To them, McAdoo is a carpet-bagger.

In addition, there is Senator Hiram Johnson, a pro-Roosevelt Republican. He plays an independent game, controls a tremendous following. He hates Hoover and the Hoover crowd in California politics.

Rumors are heard that Johnson is inclined to pull away slightly from Roosevelt. That is attributed in part to the fact that Hearst, who always has been a strong factor in Johnson's California strength, has turned on the New Deal. Johnson did not appear at the Boulder Dam ceremonies. He was said to be ill. However, in dedicating Boulder Dam, President Roosevelt and Secretary Ickes paid him glowing tributes. It is obvious that they are determined to hold him in line. They won't have much trouble doing that if Hoover turns up prominently in the Republican campaign next year. With Hoover out of the picture, Johnson may not be so inclined to participate. He doesn't come up for reelection until 1940 himself.

All of this means a great deal of pulling and hauling inside the Democratic ranks in California.

For instance, when the Democratic national chairman, Postmaster General Farley, was here recently, Hamilton Cotton arranged a great political barbecue on his ranch. Sinclair shot out word that real Democrats wouldn't attend. Farley conveniently found it impossible to be there. He was engaged in conference with the Sinclair group. He paid his respects to Cotton by calling later.

Mr. Roosevelt escaped trouble by greeting members of all factions when he stopped here a few days ago. In his Los Angeles speech, he opened his arms to everyone and urged that all liberals get together with him and not quibble over details.

While the factional battle royal causes internal party trouble, it does not affect Roosevelt directly. They all are for him. The row is largely over spoils.

California political parade: Culbert Olson, Democratic State chairman, managed Sinclair's campaign for Governor but is now pulling slightly away. He wants to keep in the good graces of the Administration at Washington, as protection against having his throat cut by the McAdoo group . . . Olson, who looks like Hobart Bosworth, is Democratic leader of the State Senate, expects to run for Governor in 1936 unless a path to the Senate opens up meantime . . . The Sinclair bloc in the State Legislature is proposing a drastic internal reform program, to be submitted to the voters on initiative ballots next year. One is for a unicameral Legislature. Another is repeal of the State sales tax . . . Sinclairites, who are strong in Los Angeles County, complain of an outworn representative system. They say that out of a State Senate of 40 members, Los Angeles County, with nearly one-half of the population of the State, gets only one senator. Conservatives retort that it evans up in the Assembly. Los Angeles has 30 members out of a otal of 80. . . . Sinclair appears to be through running for office. He is working entirely now for the EPIC cause. . . . That is a relief to all political managers in California, including his own.

There are no "Young Republicans" in California. Their organization is known as the "Junior Republicans."

The reason is that it was first formed as a Merriam-for-Governor organization. Against him was a candidate, Former Gov. C. C. Young. It was feared that if the name "Young Republicans" were used, it would be regarded as favorable to Merriam's rival.

The Junior Republicans have suffered from their pro-Merriam reputation. They have cleaned house and now profess to be impartial. To prove it they are preparing to change their name and call themselves Young Republicans.

That's how thin they slice their politics out here.

Bank's Liabilities Remain Unknown

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 9.—The special report on the possible liability of the old Baltimore Trust Co.'s officers and directors is to be a secret document unless the bank receiver or the court itself directs otherwise.

That was specified today in an order filed by Circuit Court Judge Eugene O'Dunne, who ordered the investigation.

The order stated that the investigation is designed "to ascertain whether there is probable cause for holding the officers or directors of said trust company, or any of them, liable (and if so, the nature and extent of such liability) as a result of their conduct" of the affairs of the institution.

It was ordered after a hearing before Judge O'Dunne on another phase of the Baltimore Trust Co. case revealed that more than $4,000,000 had been lost to the bank in approximately 20 loan accounts.

Paris, Oct. 9.—Italy's east African campaign thus far has cost 12,500 dead, sick and repatriated, it was reported tonight.

French agents reported passage through the Suez Canal of 10,000 Italian soldiers suffering from tropical diseases. More than 2,000 others have been stricken in home camps.

While thousands of Italian soldiers poured southward toward the war zone, a steady stream of invalids, mostly suffering from dysentery, malaria and swamp fever has followed northward.

French canal authorities said that almost every Italian troopship returning homeward carries several hundred hospital cases.

Authorities do not consider the 12,000 figure a high toll of casualties, in view of the fact that many of Italy's 200,000 colonial troops are northern Italians, unaccustomed to the blistering heat of east Africa.

French African experts believed, however, that the prospect of Italian defeat in Ethiopia, not by Emperor Haile Selassie's warriors but by slow starvation and lack of meat, is causing the Italian high command acute anxiety.

Army commanders y reportedl have informed Premier Benito Mussolini that even so-called mild economic sanctions by League powers would be fatal to the expeditionary force if they succeeded in shutting off regular supplies of frozen meat. Italy is said to have made large contracts for frozen meat from South Africa and South American countries, including 25,000 tons from Barazil.

Brazil is not a League member, hence her decision whether or not to co-operate in League sanctions is awaited anxiously in Rome.

The League's sanctions committee will have the task of settling this question under paragraph 1 of Article XVI of the Covenant, which reads that after sanctions are voted, all League members undertake to prevent "all financial, commercial or personal intercourse between nations of the Covenant-breaking state and nations of any other state whether a League member or not."

Italians in the past have bought large amounts of frozen meat from Australia, but this source is eliminated, since Australia will work with the mother country, England, to enforce the most rigid boycott. Canada and the United States are not expected to supply Italy.

In addition, it was repoorted in London yesterday that Britain was taking steps to sequester British ships having refrigerator space.

in securities. She must pay premiums on her $200,000 life insurance policies for the children's benefit.

Barrymore kept $100,000 in securities, three parcels of real estate, including their Beverly Hills mansion, and the yacht Infanta, on which the actor now is reported at sea off Miami, Fla.

Although the size of the award to Miss Costello indicated no pecuniary necessity for it, reports have been circulated that she might attempt to regain the fame she won in pictures before she wed the actor seven years ago.

Bade Her Good-by on Phone.

In low tones, Miss Costello testified she last saw Barrymore August 28, 1934. She smiled wanly as she testified.

"A situation arose in Vancouver, and I was forced to leave the yacht and come home to Los Angeles by train," she said, adding that Barrymore followed several days later.

"He phoned me," she went on, "and said he was going to New York. He said 'good-by and good luck.' Those were the last words I heard from him."

The actress wore a long, modish coat over a blue-green woolen gown. Her hat, shoes, handbag and gloves matched in dubonnet red.

with the Council's indictment of Italy.

So great was the crowd which wanted to see the crucial deliberations that police guards were called out to hold them back with ropes.

Prior to the Assembly session, its Steering Committee met secretly to discuss a program of sanctions against Italy in the presence of Aloisi. It was decided to recommend the creation of a co-ordination commission to work out penalties against rome.

In an effort to clarify his government's position, a spokesman for Hungary said its attitude is clarly against the Council and that if a vote is actually taken Hungary will vote "no."

No Roll Call Planned.

Dr. Eduard Benes, president of the Assembly, announced that unless delegates spoke against the Council's decision or made reservations, silence would be interpreted as acquiescence. In other words, no roll call vote will be taken.

Austrian circles let it be known it would be more fair to interpret the Austrian position as one of reservation rather than refusal, adding that Austria is expected to sit on a sanctions commission which will be set up tomorrow.

In opening the Assembly session, Dr. Benes pointed out that the Council considered the League is "in the presence of a war begun ni disregard of the obligations of Article XII of the Covenant."

He also read a statement by the president of the Council, Dr. Ruiz Guinazu, of Argentina, warning that members can not neglect their duties concerning the application of sanctions to violators of the Covenant "without a breach of their treaty obligations."

Court Upholds Death Sentence Of Hauptmann

Little Hope Left for German as Plea in the Lindbergh Case Is Denied.

ransom notes; and (c) the wood used in the construction of the ladder."

Speaking of the $14,600 ransom money, found in Hauptmann's home in the Bronx, the address and telephone number of Dr. John F. Condonfi the "Jaffsie" of the ransom negotiations, written on a board in the closet of Hauptmann's home, the court said:

"The explanation of the source of this money offered by defendant was incredible and we find not the slightest evidence to corroborate it. The defendant's handling of the money makes clear his guilty connection with the enterprise. He was without funds before the payment of the ransom money, and in comparative poverty.

* * * After the payment of the money he refrained from work entirely and speculated in Wall street on a comparatively large scale. His actions thereafter are persuasive of guilt."

Hauptmann's explanation that the money was in a shoebox left in his care by Isidor Fisch, his business partner who later died in Germany, was plainly preposterous, the court held.

"It is clear his new-found prosperity was evidenced long before he says he found the money claimed to have been left by Fisch," the opinion said. "It is inconceivable that Fisch, if he had this money, would have left it in the defendant's custody in the manner claimed, particularly when he was planning to leave for Germany on what seemed to be his last trip. He was afflicted with tuberculosis and died shortly after returning to his homeland.

Kidnaping Deducted.

"From the foregoing it is deductible, to a moral certainty beyond a reasonable doubt, that he collected the ransom money, and was therefore the kidnaper. * * *"

The ransom was paid by Dr. Condon on the night of April 2, 1932. The baby's body was found May 12 of that year.

As to the handwriting the court cited "the identification of the handwriting of all the ransom notes, including the one left on the window sill of the nursery window, as that of Hauptmann; the peculiarities of the expression and spelling common to all these notes and admittedly genuine writings by Hauptmann. It is likewise an inescapable inference that the writer of the ransom notes on the window sill entered the nursery and perpetrated the crime."

To support the State's case further, the court held, there was the evidence of the chisel found on the Lindbergh estate at Hopewell on the night of March 1, 1932, when the child was kidnaped. Such a chisel, the court remarked, was missing from Hauptmann's tool chest.

The opinion regarded it as significant not only that wood used in the ladder was missing from Hauptmann's home, but also that wood in the ladder had been traced to a Bronx lumber yard by Arthur Koehler, Government wood expert, long before Hauptmann's arrest.

The ladder obviously was used at the Lindbergh home to carry out the kidnaping, the opinion held, since Col. Lindbergh heard "the sound of breaking wood that evening and the ladder was found broken."

Police demonstrated further that it could have been used in the manner claimed by the prosecution, the opinion added.

"There is no significance in the selection by the kidnaper of the unlocked southeast window," the court said. "The shutters, because of warping, could not be completely closed, and it is fair to assume that the intruder selected this unlocked window by pure chance, or when he found the other windows barred."

Save for hte brief reference to Lindbergh's testimony that he heard a sound of breaking wood the night his son was stolen, the stories told at the trial by Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh were hardly touched upon in the opinion.

The court ruled, though, that Lindbergh's presence in the court room every day was not irregular, and that the trial itself was not a "circus," as the defense contended. This claim was based on the fact that spectators frequently laughed and whispered, that messenger boys were noisy and the room itself crowded.

The opinion further set aside the defense charge that Attorney General David T. Wilentz had been unnecessarily rough on Hauptmann in his cross-examination, had summed up the State case in an inflammatory fashion, and had switched his theory of death in the final summation.

The defense had contended Hauptmann's constitutional rights were thus violated and that Justice Trenchard properly should have admonished Wilentz. Speaking of Wilentz's statements to the jury, Justice Parker wrote:

"Some are expressive of a belief in defendant's guilt on the part of prosecuting officers; some are vituperative characaterizations of defendant, given his guilt. One or more intimate that the jury would be guilty of a crime in failing to convict. But we find no legal error properly raised. Throughout the lengthy summation it was at one juncture, and one only, that defense counsel was going outside the evidence."

The court held that the trial was properly held in Hunterdon County, site of the Lindbergh home, rather than in Mercer County where the body was found. The fatal blow was inflicted in Hunterdon, the opinion said.

Upholds "Larceny" View.

It ruled also that the defense was wrong in insisting no larceny was committed "in view of the surrender of the sleeping suit," holding that the taking of the suit and its surrender without payment "was an initial and probably essential step in the intended extortion of money."

The jury would have been right in inferring that had Dr. Condon refused to continue with the preliminary negotiations the sleeping sut would never have been delivered.

"In that situation the larceny was established," the opinion said.

The defense had contended Trenchard's charge was unfair. The court of errors and appeals said:

"The whole charge shows signs of having been prepared with great care and without waste of words."

The defense brief, the opinion said, overlooked "one of the most thoroughly settled rules in our New Jersey criminal jurisprudence. That rule is that it is always the right and often the duty of a trial judge to comment on the evidence and give the jury his impressions of its weight and value and such comment is not assignable for error so long as the ultimate decision on disputed facts is plainly left to the jury."

son we separated. I never did really love my husband. We just couldn't get along. His mother and father always objected to me and we just couldn't get along."

Asked whether she planned a new marriage if divorced she said: "I could say yes or no. You'll just have to guess."

Mrs. Kessler voiced implicit faith in the efficacy of blood tests, while conceding she knew nothing of how they were made.

"I know it'll turn out all right," she said. "I know it. I know it. I just feel that way. It couldn't show anything else."

Discusses Corespondent.

She said she rarely saw Joseph Vandeventer, of the 5500 block Illinois avenue northwest, named as corespondent by her husband.

"I went out with hi mtwice after we were separated," she said. "I haven't sen him since."

Mrs. Kessler said she hoped to obtain $35 a month alimony to support her son. Her other child, Barbara Ann, 3, she said, has a "good home" with the husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Kessler, sr., 5300 Illinois avenue northwest.

The husband declined to comment, "on the advice of council."

Dr. R. C. Williams, of the Public Health Service, questioned the value of blood tests.

"A test," he said, "is more negative than positive. A child may have the same type of blood as its father or it may have an entirely different type of blood.

"Human blood falls into four classifications and a child may have one type and the father another.

"Of course, if the blood is the same there is stronger evidence of paternity but such evidence is not conclusive."

and attempted to fire it, but was prevented.

He was taken immediately to the detective bureau for questioning.

The police statement said the prisoner declared he killed his stepdaughters because he wanted to be "rid" of them.

The two girls, according to the statement, were placed in a rowboat on Slag Lake, in Michigan, rowed to deep water, tied to a plowpoint and dumped overboard.

Children Die Silently.

The girls, daughters of his wife by a former marriage, made no outcry as they were wired to the plow-point, the statement said. When they disappeared, Rowland rowed back to shore, got in a truck in which he had left Harrison, Mich., with his step-daughters, and drove on.

Fairfield, Maine, Oct. 8 (AP).—Police, pressing investigation of the fiendish slaying of Annie K. Knight, 12, whose strangled body was found tied to a tree stump, late today held a middle-aged man for questioning.

Sheriff Martin J. Gallant, of Somerset County, said the suspect had not lived here long.

The girl's hands had been tied behind her head and a gag placed over her mouth. A rope had been tied tightly around her neck. Medical Examiner W. S. Stinchfield said she had been criminally assaulted.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Knight. Her father was a laborer.

Most lots of strictly combing 48s, 50s, ¼-blood Ohio fleeces were held at 35 cents in the grease, although a few offerings were available at 34 cents. "Here's to Romance" Introduces a Glorious New Voice to the Musical Screen

Nino Martini Is Operatic Star Coming to Fox

Makes Auspicious Debut; Afterthoughts on Hit; Amusement Notes.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It has remained for Jesse L. Lasky, veteran producer, to bring to the screen, through the agency of Fox Films, the masculine counterpart of the Grace Moore celluloid successes.

The picture which transcribes the basic dramatic elements of "One Night of Love" and "Love Me Forever" into suitable cinematic terms for the exploitation of a male opera star is "Here's to Romance," starring Nino Martini in his first role in pictures, and also affording Mme. Schumann-Heink the medium of her screen debut at the age of 74.

Lacing a rather familiar narrative together with a succession of incidents that are sometimes cheap and tawdry, "Here's to Romance" erases any unfortunate impressions its story may leave by the incomparable music in which it abounds.

Occasionally it makes the blunder of causing sounds that are not there to emanate from the screen, but in the main the musical treatment of this subject is beyond reproach. In my negligible view, it is inexcusable for the director to seat a singer at the piano to play his own accompaniment and then at the first touch of the keys have the majestic strains of a full symphony orchestra burst forth.

This is a fault that harks back almost a decade to the first coming of sound to the screen and unfortunately is still being persisted in. An orchestra nonexistent in the scene projected necessarily could not be heard.

Must Rely on Music.

However, in view of the legitimate use to which standard operatic compositions have been put in this picture, such objections probably are mere quibbling. And it is upon the musical qualities of the film that it must rely most heavily for its box-office success. The story is a trifle too trite to command the attention its music and the manner of its execution deserve.

Nino Martini has a magnificent tenor voice, of which full use is made in this production which, inevitably, must bring one step nearer the day when a complete grand opera performance in gelatin will be offered the public, just as the Warner Brothers finally have had the temerity to bring Shakespeare to the silver sheet in the grand manner.

In emulation, but not imitation, of Miss Moore, Martini sings not only familiar arias from the standard operas, but introduces popular tunes as well. Two of these were composed especially for this film by Con Conrad—"Here's to Romance" and "Midnight in Paris."

In addition to these melodies in the lighter vein, the star's superb voice is heard in Toselli's "Serenade," Leoncavallo's "Mattinata" and the "Vesti la Giubba" aria from "Pagliacci"; Massenet's "Manon," Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" and Puccini's "La Tosca."

Are Logically Introduced.

These are not arbitrary interpolations dragged in without regard to the requirements of the story, but, as in the case of Miss Moore's pictures, constitute an essential factor in plot development.

This is true also of the dances by Maria Gamberelli, formerly premiere danseuse at the Roxy Theater, Vicente Escudero, greatest of the Spanish Gypsy exponents of the dance, and Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink's brief snatch of Brahms' "Lullaby."

In defense of the story, it should be said that it improves in soundness and credibility as it progresses. The final scene expresses eloquently man's complete incapacity to grasp the contribution to his triumph made by the modestly helpful womenfolk in his life.

When "Here's to Romance," which was privately previewed yesterday afternoon, is formally reviewed in these columns Saturday morning, it will be wholeheartedly recommended as a picture with a fine artistic purpose and one which it largely fulfills.

Speaking of previews, yesterday was fairly packed with them. After having listened to the robust beauties of the Martini voice—it is by no means a dry Martini, although fully as stimulating—for an hour and a half in the afternoon, the drama desks again probably were held in thrall last midnight by "The Last Days of Pompeii," Merian C. Cooper's latest contribution to the amazement of mankind.

Since this is being written prior to the event, it is impossible to report on the merits of this production beyond the fact that it is heralded as one of the most tremendously spectacular things brought to the screen in this or any other season. The manner in which it lives up to its billing will be disclosed here at a later date—provided we are not choked to death with volcanic dust and buried under streams of molten lava a little later on, as Mr. Meakin, who is throwing the party, assures us we will think we have been!

Afterthoughts on "Venus."

It is almost invariably true that in the midnight rush following a late final curtain of an important opening, a theatrical review fails to comprehend more than a fraction of the things the reviewer had hoped to say. It was so Monday night in the case of "Venus in Silk," the delightful operetta current at the National.

It was purposed, for example, to commend Audrey Christie for a performance of the ingenue role that was so skillfully embellished with by-play and clever individual touches as to convey the impression that she had played the part of Nina for a year, instead of a week. Similarly our intentions were wholly honorable with regard to Gilbert Lamb's dancing opposite Miss Christie—or vice versa, as the case may be. Mr. Lamb is not unknown to patrons of the varieties. He is a boneless young man whose terpsichorean contortions are not quite like any other dancer's on the contemporary stage.

Out of Key? So What?

Then there was the matter of John Sheehan's lines in the last act—the only one in which he appears, by the way. In an operetta wholly in the atmosphere of provincial Hungary, Mr. Sheehan spouts a lusty succession of witty lines dealing almost entirely with present-day American politics and statesmanship—if any. This would be a jarring note if they had anything vital to do with the plot, or ran through all of the three acts—but they do not.

And, after all, they have been singing topical political verses to the songs in "The Mikado" for the last 50 years. So what difference does it make?

There could have been something more said about the singing of Nancy McCord and J. Harold Murray, too, but again, what was the use? Mr. Murray has been tops for years and Miss McCord is right up there with him.

Perhaps we said it all yesterday morning, after all. If not, then once and for all, we think "Venus in Silk" is a very elegant bit of theater from every point of view. In case you can't find us anywhere else, we'll be prowling around the back of the house watching it again.

If any of the bill collectors see this, I am only kidding in that last sentence!

Add "Attractions the Capital Almost Got": The visit to Washington of Anita Louise, lovely young blonde of the cinema, who was scheduled to be in the city in person tomorrow, but will not be owing to pressing demand for her services in the West Coast studios. Miss Louise would be a doubly welcome visitor at just this time by reason of the fact that she is importantly cast opposite Nino Martini in "Here's to Romance," already mentioned in these dispatches, and likewise is prominent in the all-star cast of Max Reinhardt's production for the Warner Brothers of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," booked for the National beginning Sunday, October 27. A wire yesterday, however, canceled the whole merry business. So there will be no press receptions, cocktail parties, gay gadding about and whatnot tomorrow. But that's the way life is.

Mr. Gordon Is Generous.

Max Gordon is one producer who is determined "to do right by our Washington."

On Monday, October 21, Mr. Gordon is bringing his new production of "Pride and Prejudice," dramatized from the Jane Austen novel by Helen Jerome, to the National Theater for a permiere engagement of one week. Leading the cast are Adrienne Allen, Helen Chandler and Colin Keith Johnson, with Edwina Wise, graduate of the Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts and Manager Stephen E. Cochran's National Theater Players, in a small part of her own and bearing the additional responsibility of understudying the two feminine leads. This will be a first time on any stage.

Big One on Way.

On November 11, which is by way of being three weeks later to the day, Mr. Gordon will bring to the National that colossus among modern musical productions, "The Great Waltz."

It is gratifying to learn that "The Great Waltz," although it may fit with something the snugness of the proverbial glove, still can be staged in its entirety on the National's exceptionally large stage. Several stage technicians will precede the "Waltz" to Washington to make whatever alterations may be necessary to insure the staging of the piece in its entirety, peregrinating orchestras, levitated choruses and all.

And in between will come "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in all its Reinhardtian splendor, so what have we to kick about? Barring high taxes, that is.

Lost-in-Transit Note.

What! No last line?

The Navy Stars in Another One

This is in no sense a naval mobilization inspired by the flareup of hostilities in Eastern Africa, but merely a suggestion of the atmosphere of the latest screen feature made by Hollywood in co-operation with the United States Navy Department and the officers and men of the Naval Academy at Annapolis. The name of the picture is "Shipmates Forever" and it was filmed in large measure at Annapolis last June. Somewhere down in the lower right-hand corner are to be found Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell, the leads in this subject to be seen on the Earle screen beginning on Friday of this week.

The Federal Diary

Title Registered, U. S. Patent Office.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Morgan Baker.

GUARDS at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, long the subjects of one of the most inequitable pay situations in Government service, have organized under the National Federation of Federal Employes, being designated as Local 249, the number of a former union at the bureau.

BAKER.

The local is open to all men of the Bureau who have a Civil Service status and are not affiliated with any other employe organization.

It was emphasized last night by Henry Fewell, president, that the new group is not a competitor with the veteran NFFE Local No. 105 at the Bureau. Mr. Fewell's local is composed exclusively of men, while No. 105's membership is entirely women. The locals will be partners, rather than competitors, in virtually all legislative and other employe matters, Mr. Fewell said.

Assisting in administrative duties are:

Thomas C. Justus, first vice president; Robert L. Lorentz, second vice president; Henry F. Stille, treasurer; Heywood N. Saunders (C), secretary; Forrest E. Chappell, recorder, and William F. Grasshurth, guardian.

The first meeting under the new officers will be held at Recreation Hall, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Friday night. WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Exotic Perfume Made for Furs, Heavy Fabrics

Preparations of the Same Fragrance Included in Display.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

PERFUMES, like friends, should be chosen with great discretion and tried until proved true.

But how many women realize this? To most of them one scent is as good as another. They shop in haste and at random, and as a result they do not receive the full benefit perfumes can bestow.

After all, whether a fragrance reminds one of woods at dawn, the flower-scented breezes of Southern France or the heavy sweetness of gardenias in a tropical clime, its chief purpose is to bestow its charm on the wearer. If it is unsuited, as it's bound to be if chosen without care, then it does nothing. It's merely a perfume.

Those of you who have been seeking a truly exotic perfume, one with the mystery of Egypt and the excitment of Paris distilled into it, should hasten to the perfume counter of a downtown store. Your wishes have been answered and your patience well rewarded.

You'll find this a perfume for formal were as an acceting note to fine grooming. As you know, the application of most perfumes to furs results in a distinct distortion of the scent. This is due to the fact that furs maintain to a high degree their own animal oils. The union of these with the perfume brings about a change of odor. Not in this case, however. Here is a perfume prepared especially for furs and heavy fabrics, for rich and luxurious clothes . . . and for alluring ladies.

On display along with the perfume you'll find bath powder and face powder, bath oil and sachets of the same fragrance.

Perfumed Jewelry.

ANOTHER downtown store is also perfumed-minded—only in a different way. For the next few days it offers perfumed jewelry. This is very novel and well worth the cost of 50 cents.

Delicate simulated white gold chains hold small filigree balls. Inside of these is cotton. A drop or two of perfume is quickly absorbed and lo, you have perfumed jewelry. It comes in a variety of styles, lariat necklaces, bracelets, drop and button earrings.

For the little miss there are small ribbon bows with a filigree ball attached. These cost but 15 cents.

Buttermilk Skin Food.

OPPORTUNITY is said to knock but once, but in this case it knocks twice a year. Right now it's urging you to take this chance to buy a $2.25 jar of a certain well-known buttermilk skin food for the present price of $1.

The sale started yestray and, believe it or not, 144 jars were sold between 9 o'clock in the morning and 6 o'clock in the evening.

And small wonder! This is a remarkable cream and a miracle worker with dry skins. It's the simplest thing in the world to use. At night you apply it, and rub it in. You'll find it is absorbed almost immediately so you aren't forced to sleep with a greasy face. In the morning you'll find your skin has a fresher look than you'd dared to hope for.

Due to its buttermilk content, the cream has a slight bleaching quality that is unusually good for sallow, yellowish skin.

Display of Assorted Rugs.

HAVE YOU EVER seen a rug in the making? If you have you know how interesting it is to watch the intricate weaving in and out, in and out. If you haven't then you can by just stopping off in a downtown store, and taking the elevator to the fifth floor. Here is a real rug display! Hand loomed, brocaded rugs, practical, smart, and modestly priced! They have a peculiar charm that especially suits them to the modern classic furniture so much in vogue.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 325, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

VEGETABLE MENU for TODAY

Shrimp Cocktail and Fruit Salad Are Served as Side Dishes.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE ATTRACTIVE display of fall vegetables at moderate prices makes it possible to turn again to the vegetable platter as an occasional means of varying the menu.

The moderate cost of a vegetable dinner makes it possible to serve a more elaborate first course, salad or dessert. Today's dinner menu, for example, suggests a vegetable platter as the piece de resistance, and includes a shrimp cocktail and a fruited jellied salad served with hot biscuits and honey and eliminates dessert.

The use of a fruit salad is more interesting for this type of meal because vegetables have already been used freely in the menu. A seafood cocktail will add more of a contrast to the rest of the meal than any other type of first course, because vegetables and fruit are to follow in the next two courses. The hot bread served with honey eliminates the necessity of a dessert but another sweet may be served if you prefer a heavier meal.

More "Thinking Time" Needed, Says Educator

More "thinking time" is needed by the world today, Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve, of Barnard College, believes. Addressing the first all-college assembly she urged the young women of the college to make college a place of study rather than of intellectual combat.

"Do fewer things and those well," she said. "Rush and whirl less. Keep sacred a little time for thinking and solitude—thinking, such a rare thing and so needed in this world."

Fur Trimming on Hats Gives Jaunty Appearance

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—"Imp" would be a good name for these saucy looking fur and fur-trimmed hats that team up so jauntily with fur and fur-trimmed coats! They snuggle closely to the head, or perch at a rakish angle, depending on the mood and the occasion.

All of fur, some of them, and devoid of other trimming. There's quite a Cossack dash to that little Persian business sketched at the upper right. Definitely an off-the-face hat, yet it snugs the head warmly, and will be a blessing when icy blasts descend in our midst. The hat sketched is black Persian, but silver Persian will top many smart costumes, too.

Antelope and fur team up right smartly this season. Sketched at the upper left is a black suede antelope trimmed simply with a band of black fox across the front.

Velvet and fur make a stunning combination for late afternoon gadding. Richly colored velvet is often banded with mink, or trimmed with two mink tails perched dizzily at the very top. You see this effect in the hat sketched at the lower left. Some of the velvet is even brocaded for greater elegance.

Of course, a bright or richly colored hat is more striking when matched up with some accessory. Wine red or dark green hats team up well with gloves or handbag. We say or advisedly . . . a whole set of matching accessories looks monotonous. Contrast is Fashion's color theme song this fall.

Those blessed with well-balanced features can cheerfully ignore this paragraph. But those who possess one especially prominent feature that overbalances the others, and who wish to choose a hat that will even matters up a bit, will do well to send for our leaflet: "When Choosing a Hat . . ." Just mail us the attached coupon, with requested inclosures.

British Borrow 'O.K.' From America

The English are so far yielding to the American influence as to say "O. K." Sir William A. Craigie, noted British lexicographer, reported recently on his arrival in New York.

While Sir William does not approve of "O. K." he cited it as an example of some of the distinctly American words that are gaining a foothold in England.

Sir William, who was knighted by King George V for his 30 years of work on the Oxford English Dictionary, is about to begin his tenth year of work on a "Dictionary of American English" under the auspices of the University of Chicago. It will deal chiefly with words of American origin.

Beauty Expert Assails Theory Regarding Age

Ruth D. Maurer Denies Women Lose Youth Faster Than Men.

THE age-old theory that a woman ages twice as quickly as a man was scouted as ridiculous yesterday by Miss Ruth D. Maurer, dean of the beauty profession, and educational director of American Cosmeticians.

"There's no question about it," said Miss Maurer. "You can spot a grandfather any time, but nowadays who can tell a grandmother from a granddaughter?"

Miss Maurer, who is delivering a series of lectures at the third Washington annual Beauty and Style Show held at the Hotel Raleigh, said there were excellent reasons why women had learned to preserve their youth.

"After all," she explained, "it was a question of learning. Ten years ago what woman wasn't eager to look at 50 like she did at 30? But how could she? She didn't have an inkling of how to begin, nor half the incentive that she has today.

Must Keep Up Appearances.

"Hundreds of grandmothers are in the business world now," she continued. "In order to stay in the swim they have to keep up their appearance. They know that time spent on care of the skin and hair is not wasted. Consequently, they have started studying what it takes to keep them lovely and youthful and they bend their efforts in this direction."

Miss Maurer, who delivered a series of lectures at the third woman going in for hair tints and cosmetics to the extent that she looked artificial. On the other hand she believes a woman should do all in her power to improve on Nature.

"To be merely natural looking isn't enough," she said. "It might be natural for her to have thin, pale lips, dull eyes, white cheeks and stringy hair. But in this case she must glorify Nature. She must give her lips color and shape. She must brighten her eyes by putting a bloom on her cheeks and her hair should be healthy looking, glossy, soft and well groomed."

Crepey hands and crepey necks, Miss Maurer pointed out, are dead give-aways in regard to age. As a result, women have undertaken to remedy these defects by proper treatments, and the use of oils and creams.

Girls More Neglectful.

"It isn't difficult to convince an older woman that she must take care of herself to look well," Miss Maurer said. "The difficulty lies in convincing young people that they should. It's these girls in their teens and early twenties who think that youth is all they need. They don't bring out their best points by careful grooming and beauty treatments. As a result, you see young girls looking far less appealing than their mothers—or grandmothers.

Pay for Taking Medicine Held A Poor Method

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"I'LL GIVE YOU a nickel if you'll take your medicine."

The first two or three times a bribe is offered it works if the bribe is large enough. After that either the bribe must be increased or the child may refuse to respond even to that touchstone.

Certainly bribery should never be used in gaining an end which is essential to his welfare. If the bribe fails to be effective only force is left. Nor should the mother employ the emotional note, "For my sake!" Sob-stuff loses its force also if used more than once.

Before the child can speak, he should be trained to accept the doctor's orders as final, and no protest or appeal should avail to relieve him from carrying them out. No matter how vile the dose, how heoric the treatment, the mother must herself show no hesitancy in administering it. For it is generally the parent's attitude which determines the child's. If she flinches at the sight of blood, or sympathizes with the child to the extent of even seeming to criticize the doctor for undue severity, the child immediately reflects her attitude.

If the parents do not entirely trust their physician, they had better change him at once for one in whom they can have complete confidence. This confidence they should make the child feel also. Whatever he prescribes must be carried out without question by both parent and child.

Many parents consider themselves too soft-hearted to inflict pain or discomfort on a child. They consider the mother who can add to her child's suffering as lacking in love and sympathy. But the love which forgets its own pain for the child's ultimate good is far more real than the sentimentality which indulges the child for its immediate comfort.

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

New England Apple Pie Was Favorite Dish of Coolidge.

By Pattie Ellicott.

IN THE quaint farmhouse at Plymouth Notch, Vt., which had sheltered generations of the Collidge family; in the double family house at Northampton, Mass., and in the White House one could always count on a favorite dish on many menus served to President and Mrs. Coolidge—and that was apple pie.

The late President Coolidge shared the unfailing love of New Englanders for pie—and particularly apple pie. He could eat it for any meal, including breakfast, in keeping with his Puritan ancestry—and did. The fanciest concoctions of caterers could not rank in President Coolidge's mind with the gustatory delights of New England apple pie.

In a moderate manner, Mrs. Coolidge shared her husband's liking for apple pie. Furthermore, she knew how to make it to a President's tastes. When her two sons, John C. Coolidge and Calvin Coolidge, jr., grew old enough to enjoy "Mother's apple pie," they joined their father in praise of the ability of the family piemaker.

It might be pointed out that she recommended a cut of cheese as an accompaniment to the apple pie, a timely tip for anyone who wants to get the full flavor out of this homely dessert.

In making apple pie Mrs. Coolidge proceeded as follows:

The first step was to line a pie plate or small biscuit pan with sweet pie dough, letting the pastry extend part of the way up the sides if a biscuit pan is used. Then choose, out of a teeming barrel of apples, sound, ripe ones, pare, core, then quarter; if large, cut in half lengthwise once more.

A sirup should be made, allowing one tablespoon sugar for each large apple, or two small ones, unless the apples are very tart. The water should just cover the sugar. When sirupy drop in apple pieces, a few at a time. These pieces should be cooked slowly, until tender, but do not permit them to become broken. Cool the remaining sirup.

Put the cooked apples carefully on pastry, then sprinkle on any left-over sirup. Then sprinkle with cinnamon, a little sugar and bits of butter.

Beat together one whole egg with one-quarter cup milk and pour it over the top of the pie. Bake in a good, moderate oven. It can be served either plain or with cream. Best of all, it can be served cold with equal delight to the diners.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IT TOOK a very impudent new hat to revive our goodby-to-summer spirits last week. And now it is going to take lots of rejuvenations in our bedroom to make us feel up to facing the fall and winter with the right lilt . . . it was such a very nice summer. We know how this reader feels.

* * * *

F. W. WRITES: There's nothing really the matter with my bedroom, except that I'd enjoy a change. I don't see why I shouldn't have two sets of spreads, curtains and chair covers . . . then switch them back and forth. Now I have taffeta and lace—I'd like to put them away for a while and live with something more informal. The furniture is walnut but noncommittal enough to stand either treatment. The walls are ivory and the rug is blue. What would you suggest?

* * * *

ANSWER: I like the idea of having two sets of covers and curtains for a bedroom. Why don't you have your second set include an old timey patchwork quilt for your bed, a slip cover in a sprigged chintz with a good deal of rose in the pattern, then glass curtains with big embroidered dots in them and bordered with three-inch chintz ruffles. Use the same embroidered material for a dressing table skirt trimmed with chintz ruffles. Another idea would be to have a quilt with a good deal of red and blue in the pattern, then use bright red chintz draperies over ivory glass curtains and a bright red slip cover for the chair. The dressing table skirt would be sweet in a patchwork pattern to match the quilt on the bed . . . this wouldn't be hard to make as it shouldn't be quilted.

Tobacco Users Are Cautioned Against Excess

Smokers Are Advised to Abstain One Month in Every 12.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

MOST physicians are smokers, some excessively so, though they are not unaware of the effect of the immoderate use of tobacco on the nervous system, the heart, and the digestive tract. A recent report by Silbert notes that of 1,000 cases of thromboanglitis obliterans which he studied not one occurred in a nonsmoker. He states also that the progress of the disease can be halted in most instances by the elimination of tobacco. He observed 309 patients for from two to ten years and witnessed no recurrence of symptoms as long as abstinence was enforced.

The so-called smoker's heart, which manifests itself in some, is characterized by an increase in the rate of the heart-beat. Certain it is that the individual who comes to the physician with a rapid, irritable heart and who, at the same time, relates that he smokes a dozen or more cigars each day, can be relieved in a very high percentage of cases through the reduction of tobacco consumption.

Appetite Often Reduced.

Not always, but sometimes, excessive smoking is the cause of improper nutrition. This appears to be accounted for by the fact that appetite is reduced, particularly in the continuous smoker. Those who smoke only after meals do not observe this symptom. Those who chew the end of a cigar or who chew tobacco invariably swallow a considerable amount of watery extract of the tobacco leaf. The alkali in the saliva somewhat favors the extraction of nicotine. Even though the alkaloid (nicotine) is not swallowed, other substances found in the leaf will produce some nausea and hence lack of appetite.

Wright and Moffat studied the effects of tobacco upon the capillary circulation in the skin. They found that carbon monoxide, so often urged as one of the poisonous products of smoking, can be largely disregarded. Their experimental subjects used standard cigarettes, and careful measurements were made of the temperature at the tips of fingers and toes following indulgence. Some individuals showed a drop in temperature that averaged 5.3 degrees F. after smoking one cigarette. This indicated that the circulation to the extremities was greatly reduced—apparently from constriction of the blood vessels through the influence of nicotine on the nervous system.

Why Not Use Holders?

If one must smoke he should recall that good hygiene demands moderation and that smoking immediately after meals is the best time. Inhaling adds to absorption and hence to toxicity. Cigar and cigarettes holders are fashionable and attractive, so why not use them?

The principal health difficulty is that the habit is carried to excess. The cigar smoker is not content with one cigar after each meal, nor the cigarette smoker with six or eight cigarettes a day. It is the piling up of tobacco toxins in the body that is damaging.

We must recall that smoking is followed by an increase in the rate of the heartbeat, and that indulgence is attended with an effect upon the capillaries that in certain individuals predisposes to blood vessel disease. It is largely a question of quantity. Sensible persons will not gormandize food, yet their tobacco consumption amounts to the same thing. If we would save vital tissues for the strain that will come sooner or later, tobacco consumption must at all times be moderate. It would be well if each smoker would abstain from the practice 1 month in every 12.

The Democrats, directed by Mrs. James H. Wolfe, will have a keynoter a week on the radio, and rallies scheduled for Kansas, Massachusetts, Indiana and Maryland.

Republican women on both sides of the continent will be meeting their new director, Mrs. Robert Lincoln Hoyal, as she makes her first big speaking swing to the West Coast, flying back for meetings in Rhode Island and New Hampshire.

Changes in the Status of Women Described by Visitor.

By Dudley Harmon.

TO THE AMERICAN who has never been there, India is a country of temples, elephants, and women who marry as children and spend their lives in continual childbearing and meek submission to the men, their masters.

The average American is right with respect to the temples and the elephants, but wrong about the women, says Miss Jean Begg, secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association of India, Burma and Ceylon. Miss Begg is in Washington on her way back to India after visiting her home in Dunedin, New Zealand.

According to Miss Begg, the women of India have undergone a complete change of status within recent years. They have emerged from centuries of seclusion to play an increasingly active part in public affairs. In ever greater numbers they are attending universities, adopting athletics and taking up the professions of law, teaching and even banking.

Active In Social Work.

"The women of present day India," Miss Begg said, "are tremendously interested in social and educational reform. Every year they meet in the so-called 'all-India conference,' a gathering of representative women from the country at large, where they adopt resolutions looking to the social betterment of other members of their sex. Upon returning to their native cities and villages, they strive to put these resolutions into effect.

"One outstanding accomplishment for which the women deserve chief credit is the clause in the recent home rule bill setting 14 years as the minimum age at which women may marry. For centures child marriage has been a blot upon India's history, but the practice is gradually on the decrease, and, thanks to the new bill, we expect it to be eliminated.

"At present, Indian women are fighting for the franchise for all literate members of their sex. The home rule bill sets certain property qualifications as requisite for the privilege of voting, but many Indian women are endeavoring to substitute literacy as the only qualification."

Miss Begg said that while there are numerous and well-attended women's colleges, supported by missions and the Government, the women are now fighting for the right to be allowed to attend the men's universities. Not only exceptionally intelligent, these Indian women are possessed of tremendous intellectual curiosity, according to Miss Begg.

The professions, hitherto open only to men, are now offering new and lucrative careers to women, she reports. Women doctors, nurses and lawyers are now accepted, instead of laughed at, as formerly.

"For example, the family of a friend of mine," she said, "consists of six girls, all of whom have adopted different careers. One is a social welfare worker, another a doctor, the third an instructor in art, the fourth a professor of science, the fifth a botany teacher, and the youngest, who recently obtained her master's degree in commerce, is about to enter banking."

Miss Begg feels that the widely read book by Katherine Mayo, "Mother India," on which many Americans base their opinions of India, and which presents a sinister and unpleasant picture of that country, represents one side only of the situation. The India of Miss Mayo's book is a disease ridden, almost unbelievably backward country, and while Miss Begg admits that such conditions exist to a certain exent, she believes that they are greatly exaggerated in "Mother India."

Chambersburg Accepts WPA Water Line Grant

Chambersburg, Pa., Oct. 9.—The Borough Council on Monday night accepted the Government grant of $101,496 through the WPA for construction of an auxiliary line from the town to the source of water supply, 12 miles east in the South Mountain. At the same time the council directed its finance committee to devise means of paying the town's share of $124,050. A councilmanic bond issue is favored rather than an elevtoral one.

The town has until December 15 to begin work under the terms of the Government appropriation.

FAT GIRLS GET THE GO-BY—SLIM GIRLS WIN MEN
Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, Harsh, Exhausting Baths or Weakening, Irritating, Habit-Forming Laxatives
There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.
All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.
Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out this way.
Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same scientific method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with methods that are hard, futile or depend on harmful, health-racking salts and laxatives for their action. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get Marmola today from druggists. Adv.

Employe Debts.

For several years the private debts of Government employes in the District have served as a sort of side-line dilemma when the pressure of more momentous problems has been eased. No uniform solution seems to have been worked out because of the highly controversial nature of the question and the great diversity of the cases which arise. If the conference held at the behest of the White House can work out a formula that will mete out justice to both employes and creditors, it will merit the thanks of the community.

There is sound logic behind the refusal of Congress to permit the legal attachment of Government salaries. It is generally agreed that such a practice would aid in the swindling of gullible persons on the Federal pay roll and would virtually make Government disbursing officers collecting agencies for private creditors. Of course, the executive departments have no desire to frustrate the claims of legitimate creditors. On the other hand, they do not care to assume the responsibility of enforcing the provisions of innumerable private contracts in which Government workers happen to be involved.

To avoid the attitude of protecting employes from legitimate creditors, therefore, most of the departments have sought to apply moral pressure to delinquent debtors. In some respects this practice seems to be as objectionable as the attachment of salaries; for it may put superior officers in the role of judge over their subordinates' private affairs.

These objections may be largely overcome, however, by the adoption of reasonable and uniform rules to be applied in all departments, bureaus, commissions, etc. It is this task which the advisory conference hopes to perform. If it succeeds, the maintenance of the new standard will still be a delicate problem. Nevertheless, it should eliminate most of the injustice resulting from haphazard meddling in Government employes' private affairs.

District Judgeships.

As a rule the practice of selecting only District residents for positions in the local government is basically sound. The mere fact that Washington is the Nation's Capital should not open its official posts to carpetbaggers from distant States. The tendency for patronage hunters to encroach upon local offices is one of the weakest aspects of the District's system of government.

In general, therefore, the support of the District Bar Association for the campaign to reserve "District jobs for District men" will be welcomed. Certainly the local bar should be thoroughly canvassed whenever a local judicial post becomes vacant. Other things being equal, preference should undoubtedly be given to the District candidate. On the other hand, the bar would probably be the last group to contend that local aspirants should be chosen regardless of their relative experience and qualifications.

For two reasons the bar association's campaign to secure more adequate consideration of its members for judicial appointments has gotten off to an unfortunate beginning. First, it opposed the confirmation of Judge Harold M. Stephens as a member of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, in spite of his eminent qualifications for that important position. Secondly, it has centered its fight upon appointments to a tribunal that is not local in a strict sense of the word.

It is true that most Federal judges are selected from the area in which they must function. But the Federal courts here are not comparable in every respect with the corresponding tribunals in other parts of the country. Most of the important cases arising in the Circuit Court of Appeals here involve some national interest. Moreover, this is the only jurisdiction in which injunctions against Cabinet officers may be obtained. In these circumstances the training and merits of judicial appointees become obviously more important than their place of residence.

The bar association tacitly recognizes this fact in asking only that three of the five members of the appellate court be Washington lawyers. That request does not appear unreasonable, provided three highly-qualified nominees are available as vacancies occur. To write such a requirement into the law, however, might lower the caliber of the court by too narrowly restricting the President's discretion.

Geneva Vs. Rome.

With the summoning of the League Assembly in special session yesterday the enormous strength theoretically aligned against Italy, as an aggressor state, becomes apparent. Delegations of 57 nations, including all of Italy's immediate neighbors and two or three which would singly be more than a fair match for the Fascist state, have come together to decide what methods should be used to validate the League's Covenant. At first glance it would seem that the odds are hopelessly weighted against Mussolini.

Actually, however, this is far from being the case. The mere fact that Il Duce is proceeding defiantly along his chosen course is strong evidence of weaknesses behind the bold front the League has assumed. The Italian dictator has amply proved himself a shrewd, astute and capable leader. He has unquestionably carefully assessed the forces potentially arrayed against him, deciding that he has at least a sporting chance to frustrate them.

Italy's greatest asset, in the epic drama now opening, of course centers in the fact that she has the inside track. The enormous advantages possessed by a dictatorship in striking quickly, effectively, and under the unquestioned direction of a single centralized will, are now being exploited to the full.

In contrast there is not merely the inability of democratic governments, like those of Great Britain and France, to decide their course without reference to popular will. Even more of an obstacle is the very loose organization of the League of Nations, where no major action binding its members can be taken except by unanimous consent. Americans who have often criticized the League as a "superstate" should now observe how the complete sovereignty of the nations composing it will retard action in a crisis. Already Austria and Hungary have expressed their opposition to a policy of sanctions.

Furthermore, Italy is following a course of independent procedure as old as history, while the League is feeling its way toward a system of collective action in behalf of peace which is absolutely without precedent in the story of mankind. There is no experience to guide the steps of those who must set up a novel, an intricate and at best a cumbersome machinery to make sanctions effective. That there will be blunders and fumbling in this gigantic task is inevitable.

Meantime Italian diplomacy will seek to undermine every weak point in the collective system. A case in point is the subtle statement made on Tuesday by Romolo Angelone, Italian commercial attache in New York. "Repercussions from any threatened economic measures against Italy will be negligible," predicts Mr. Angelone, "and their result will be to afford opportunity to the United States to gain a more secure foothold in the Italian market."

On the other hand, the position of Italy is in many respects pitifully insecure. In the first week of war she has scarcely dented the Ethiopian defenses, and time as well as climate and topography are fighting against the Italian troops. If the League of Nations did not exist Italy would have to win this war quickly, or risk financial, economic and possibly social collapse at home. So pressure from Geneva would not have to be very drastic in order to bear heavily on Italian stability.

Moreover, though sanctions have never before been tried, much thought has been put on the subject and rough blueprints already exist to serve as guides in the initial stages. As far back as 1921 it was decided that each country must freely choose what pressures it should exert against a declared aggressor, and that these pressures should be mild at first, intensifying if the "defaulting state persists in its conduct as a violator of the Covenant." One of the simplest pressures, of course, will be for League members to restrict, or embargo, imports from Italy, thus cutting down her ability to buy the articles essential to successful prosecution of the war.

This, evidently, is what Mr. Angelone anticipates. It explains why he wants the United States to profit from League action. And it is doubtless only the first instance of the way in which Italy will seek to turn American neutrality into effective opposition to the Geneva program. If that end can be achieved, the chances of Mussolini's eventual success will be much brighter. Remote as this crisis seems to us, it is well to recognize from the beginning that, neutrality or no neutrality, its outcome depends to a considerable extent on the course we follow.

The Good Fight.

Gen. Adolphus W. Greely, trail blazer of the Arctic, is gravely ill at Walter Reed Hospital. To all appearances, it is a far cry from the tired, sick old man who is fighting for his life at the age of 91 to the dashing young officer of 37 who was chosen to guide the Lady Franklin Bay expedition into the Arctic. But to those who know and appreciate the youthful and courageous spirit which dominates the grizzled old explorer the difference is merely one of years.

Adventure is the keynote that has dominated the general's life. But the "nettle of danger" alone was not enough for him; he has always had some creative purpose ahead; some constructive goal for the advancement of civilization. He entered the Civil War as a volunteer private soldier. His ability and capacity for leadership were soon evidenced and he was the first in the regular Army to advance from that lowly station to the rank of brigadier general. It is typical of the man that his non-military record is equally as inspiring—in him truly adventurer and thinker were and are happily welded. His is the credit also for the construction of thousands of miles of telegraph lines and cables in Alaska, China, Cuba and Puerto Rico.

For many years now Gen. Greely's battles and quests have taken place only in the fertile fields of his memory. He has lived to see airplanes and radio remove many of the hazards against which he struggled in the frozen North. He has lived to receive national recognition of his intrepid contribution to science in the form of a Congressional Medal of Honor. He has lived the life of a gentleman, a scholar, a soldier and an explorer.

His fellow citizens can only pray that the old general will put up as successful a fight in this hour of darkness as he did in his moments of supreme courage at Cape Sabine.

Tenants And The AAA.

A vital problem of the South to which Congress gave some attention last spring is revived with the publication of a little volume entitled, "The Collapse of Cotton Tenancy," by Charles S. Johnson, Edwin R. Embree and W. W. Alexander. A detailed study of the wretched conditions under which 1,790,700 families live in the cotton belt has been completed under direction of Dr. Rupert B. Vance, of the University of North Carolina Institute for Research in Social Science, and Prof. Johnson, of Fisk University. The current volume is a summary of their findings.

According to these investigators, the ancient order of cotton culture in the Old South is doomed. In the ten chief cotton States, they found, more than 60 per cent of the producers are tenants. Under the AAA curtailment program their plight has become so desperate that an overhauling of the system under which cotton is produced seems to be the only alternative to starvation or permanent support of former tenants on the dole.

The exploitation of Southern tenants is not, of course, a recent development. Tenancy is really an outgrowth of slavery, and in some ways it still closely resembles the system under which the South first built up its cotton plantations. Abuses of the sharecropper relationship were common even in the so-called heyday of prosperity and the incomes of these unfortunate families were extremely low. However, current interest centers chiefly in the new difficulties that have been heaped upon the cotton tenant by an agricultural policy ostensibly designed to benefit farmers as a class.

"The Government under the AAA," says Prof. Johnson, "has assumed many of the risks of the landowner, and thrown them on the tenant. * * * The tenant's share of rental (benefits) is pitifully small or nil, and on him is thrown the brunt of reduced acreage. * * * The tenant found himself loser in any event; if he was not displaced from the farm entirely, he remained as a casual laborer, and if he did not suffer this change in status, his operations were so small as to be unprofitable."

Landowners may obtain Government credit on terms not available to the tenant. In many cases their debts have been scaled down through refinancing, but they have not been required to make corresponding reductions in the obligations of their sharecroppers. "It is but the blunt truth," writes Prof. Johnson, "to say that under the present system the landowner is more and more protected from risk by Government activity, while the tenant is left open to risks on every side."

It is significant that these social scientists have arrived at the same general conclusions that were embodied in the farm tenancy bill which Congress failed to enact at its last session. They are convinced that "only some new distribution of land ownership" will save sharecroppers in the Old South from intolerable economic slavery. The extent to which the Federal Government should assume responsibility for setting up former tenants on farms of their own is a highly controversial issue. But the desirability of its leadership in a movement toward that objective does not appear open to question.

Easy Generosity.

From the Christian Science Monitor.

In these days one hears little sympathy expressed for Premier Mussolini's adventure in Ethiopia. So Col. Edward M. House, adviser to former President Wilson, writing in Liberty Magazine, appears gallantly unsupported when he rises in at least partial defense of Italy.

World peace, he says, depends on redistribution of the colonial possessions of the world so that Japan, Germany and Italy may have room in which to develop.

Fine, very fine, but what of Ethiopia? Ethiopia would as willingly see Italy expand in Europe as explode right in its face. And as to a redistribution of colonial possessions, it should be observed that no country owns Ethiopia but Ethiopia itself.

Would Col. House be willing for the United States to sacrifice Puerto Rico in order that Italy might expand?

Cotton Booms At Our Expense.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Argentina is seeking to promote a boom in cotton growing, and finds encouragement in what that crop has done for Brazil. Offering free seed to growers, the Buenos Aires government recites how cotton was only 1 per cent of Brazilian exports until 1934, when it leaped to 13 per cent and took second place only to coffee.

These South American booms, and those in other foreign cotton-growing countries, are at the expense of the United States, caused by our experiments in price-pegging and acreage reduction. American cotton, formerly 60 per cent of world consumption, has fallen to 48 per cent, a loss of 3,000,000 bales. In addition to helping our competitors, another unhappy result has been the aggravation of distress in Southern cotton States.

King Cotton has abdicated from his American throne and taken up imperial residence south of the Rio Grande. The 12-cent pegged price clearly is doing more harm than good to the American industry as a whole. It is time to seek seriously for other remedies.

The Riddle Of The Sphinx.

Letters To The Editor.

Woes Of The Pedestrian.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

It would appear that the director of traffic, Mr. Van Duzer, is never satisfied unless he is concocting a double-barrel blast against the pedestrian on Washington streets, whose right to those streets is just as good, important and just as necessary as that of any motorist.

The traffic director's latest recommendation is to levy a fine of $2 against what he terms the "jaywalker," and another dollar against the fellow who crosses the street anywhere except at the crossings. If this is not autocracy running wild it certainly is drawing near the border line of complete control over the pedestrian's movements and if such an edict is ever invoked and sustained by the courts, it will place in the hands of motorists an instrument which eventually will practically drive the pedestrian off the streets.

Let's look at the situation from a practical angle and the standpoint of actual experience and existing conditions. Just when does a pedestrian have a clear track with the right to cross a street without molestation or interference and in danger of being run down by motor traffic? He can't cross on the green lights because, although the red lights block the regular motor traffic on the street he is attempting to cross, there are still at least two other streams of passing traffic in his path, one cutting around each corner on either side of the street he is crossing, and he certainly can't cross against the red lights for the same and other obvious reasons.

The facts then really are that there is always and absolutely at all times from two to eight streams of potential traffic crossing the pedestrian's path, no matter where or when he attempts to cross, depending, of course, upon the location of the interesecting streets, where he desires to get across.

Johnson's Warning.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Whatever else may be said about Hugh Johnson, he certainly deserves credit for bringing so forcefully to our attention the potential danger of our relief situation. Listen to his words: "Federal money can't last forever, and anybody with the brains God gave geese knows that stoppage of these funds must mean riot, rebellion or revolution in two weeks' time."

Private industry (the pride of Mr. Hoover, is unable to care for the laboring proletariat. Government funds (the pride of Mr. Roosevelt), either for doles or for employment, can't last indefinitely. What then? The one and only logical answer is socialism. Whether or not socialism will come is not the question. The only problem is, how soon will socialism come, and by what means?

It is for us to school ourselves, calmly and sensibly, in order that we may be prepared to face the crisis when it arrives.

Three To One For The League.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. Tansill's explanation of the European situation is so delightfully humorous that he ought to have a medal.

He explains that England wants to keep Lake Tana from Italy and get it for herself, and so she "forces" Spain, France, Turkey, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Sweden and the rest to "fall in behind" her. She isn't threatening all these powers with force, so what persuasive statesmen she must have! She can't be promising each of these countries a Lake Tana; what reward can she be holding before their eyes? Perhaps if Mr. Tansill would read the speeches of the European leaders he would see that they "fall in behind England" because they intend to establish a system of collective peace and security through the League machinery. In 1931 he may recall several of these smaller countries were trying to lead England into taking the same position which England is now "forcing" them to take, according to Mr. Tansill.

If there is one "all-important fact" which distinguishes 1935 from 1931 in British policy, it is not Lake Tana, where British interests are threatened only in a remote and speculative way, but the rise of Hitler and the rearmament of Germany. With the income tax above 20 per cent and the cost of defense as great in proportion as $2,000,000,000 a year would be in the United States, the Englishman's pocketbook nerve has finally registered. He now sees the connection between future taxes and the establishment of a league to enforce peace on militarists.

The Englishman now sees that if he remains "unentangled and free" from the League and its obligations, it leaves Mars free, too. When Mars is free the Englishman, the Frenchman, and the Czech, the Russian, the Spaniard, and the Turk are all free, too—free to pay for munitions, free to be attacked, free to live through post war depressions.

After a close view of that kind of freedom, some Europeans would rather have Mars chained up, and they think they can perform the feat of chaining him if they give up enough of their individual freedom to indulge in a little team play under rules drawn up in 1919 under the leadership of President Wilson.

Incidentally—strange as it may seem to Mr. Tansill—President Wilson had a better view of twentieth century conditions and problems than did the renowned George Washington and better judgment concerning the policy of the United States.

T. A. B. Barefoot.

Washington, Oct. 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A complete breakdown of the League of Nations and its temporary dissolution would probably be a blessing not a tragedy. A group of nationalists, British, French and others, are using every means to uphold a half-civilized nation that needs regeneration and opposing a brilliant leader who by peaceful, economic methods has brought his people forward and upward to an honored place among nations.

It is power, not the well-being of Egyptians and East Indians, that Britain desires; it is hard to believe that those people rejoice under British rule; would they not be better off as self-governing nations?

I lived for seven years in Rome and know Italy and the Italians; they are a hard-working, good tempered people. I regret the misfortune that threatens them, for whether they are or are not successful against Ethiopia and the League, their future holds heavy taxation, and standards of living so recently raised will be reduced. I cannot recognize the slightest excuse for bringing about sanctions, war and disturbance in Europe because of the African war.

ISABELLE STONE.

Washington, Oct. 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The public cannot be concerned in a personal difference between two citizens of our city over their attitude toward the English nation.

For the sake of the principle involved and to assist in forming correct public opinion, which The Post is acting medium for in fairness, I may say: Since the League of Nations inception, I have been strong for it. Time after time I have visited Geneva to meet League representatives there and to see the League in action. I am so convinced that the idea involved is worthy of all acceptation that not even Mr. Tansill's sarcasm or Senator Borah's opposition have so much as shaken my faith in the final outcome. Today, the League stands so fully justified, despite its shortcomings, that I marvel at anything but admiration for its courageous and persistent attempts to prevent war.

My friendly critic quotes Mr. Roosevelt against me. I throw up my hands in surrender, but suggest this incident. Henry Ward Beecher was approached by a parishioner who told the great divine he had contradicted himself on a certain Sunday, and quoted what he said two Sundays before. Mr. Beecher replied: "Did I say that? If I did, I believed it—then!" Sic transit gloria!

J. O. KNOTT.

Washington, Oct. 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Many of us mere laymen are puzzled by Mussolini's not having, like Hitler, withdrawn from the League when he first determined to wage war on Ethiopia in defiance of its covenants.

Also we are further mystified now by his continued retention of League membership, if it be true that his attack was not a mere checkerboard gesture as many suspected, to secure a better compromise. A proven fact since he now gives out that he doesn't want one.

One is almost forced to the rather obvious and ominous conclusion that the new Caesar has decided to humbly acquiesce as to economic sanctions, trade embargo, etc., and to press and pursue his program of conquest to its bloody conclusion in the belief that the League will not exercise its option to employ armed force to punish and stop him.

Probably he shrewdly hopes to clean up before the League reaches that pitch, judging by the lethargy and indecision it has displayed in the past. What a crime against humanity would thus be perpetrated!

The League should apply military sanctions co-ordinately with those of economic nature, and immediately.

The Post Impressionist

In Silk—Or Even Out Of It.

Post Office, Thursday.

THE signs of the times are unpropitious for one of grandfather's dearest avocations—and, much though we love him, we rejoice. His loss may be the gain of the rest of this sad world. Indeed, if he can hang on a few months more, his own youth may be renewed like the eagle's. For it looks as if he could no longer find audiences to his laments over the operetta long departed—because it looks as if the operetta has returned to stay.

The Post-Impressionist knows no better omen for the immediate future of the race.

We have always maintained that the operetta arose from, and fully met, a deep human need. We mean the need of musical fairy-tales for grown-ups.

The type may have had its beginnings in Italy's old opera buffa: the sire presumptive is the French opera bouffe. It reached England through Gay's "Beggar's Opera," was there nursed to full flower by Gilbert and Sullivan, grew tardily in America with de Loven.

Yet not even Paris could preserve the variety as a native product: Lecoq composed only one Fille de Mme. Angot. The British plant withered when the last curtain fell on "The Arcadians," the American when Victor Herbert died: there were left merely the Gaiety salads of Lionel Monckton and Ivan Caryll, the Casino's musical comedies—there returned merely a ghost in "Rose Marie."

No, it was the eldest Strauss who had cultivated his garden for the operetta's reception as no non-Austrian had ever done. Johann II in growing Die Feldermaus proved Viennese soil the world's richest for this variety. After Oscar Strauss, Leo Fall, Lehar—after "The Merry Widow," "The Dollar Princess" and "The Count of Luxembourg," the other lands became importing countries. The Viennese composers may have, like Moliere (or was it Cyrano?) taken their own where they found it. Nevertheless, they took it, and it was their own.

Not the least of the World War's damages was the lapse of the operetta in Austria, the consequent increase of the revue in America. The melancholy days had come. The depression could scarcely accentuate them.

We tried to console ourselves with the old says: "The darkest hour is just before the dawn." No use. The night deepened. At 60 cents the dollar stood. The brilliance of Lillian Harvey shone only in the screened "Congress Dances."

And now, with the suddenness of a tropic sunrise, the operetta recrosses the oriental horizon as "Venus in Silk." She would be as welcome in—any other robe of Aphrodite.

No wonder she is heralded as something new. Besides, there is one new endeavor. If you remember "The Burgomaster," you will remember that it was regarded as peculiar because its big ensemble was of the male persuasion; the earlier operettas, being made for men, "featured" women. Since then feminism has invaded the very theater: Robert Stolz and his fellow-contributors to "Venus in Silk" try to emphasize the other sex.

Yet, succeeding in all else, in this they fail.

The production isn't an invention; it is an evolution—and even the theory of evolution was invented, not by Darwin in nineteenth century England, but by monks in fourth century Egypt. Brother Bell has well recalled that there have already been three decades of Stolz.

Why, it is all there—all delightfully there: the true operetta!

There, though dexterously twisted, is the mixed-identity plot. There is the princess in love with the man whom she little guesses to be her pet aversion. There is the tenor prince in the splendid uniform of a simple major, the cavalry chorus of little ladies, the band of singing gypsies: the best examples of all these, not to mention a première danseuse — Alice Dudley—whose interpolation is no interruption. There is a romantic waltz-song woven through the entire fabric, and a song of a decidedly different sort which everybody will whistle. Finally, there is a secondary player who runs away with first honors—Audrey Christie—just what Marilyn Miller did years ago, and Eva Tanguay before Marilyn.

In brief, there is not a single strain upon the intellect, not a single tax to ear or eye. This is a veritable Viennese operetta.

Therefore, the significance of the piece lies in its popularity, without relation to its novelty or familiarity, age or youth. All operetta is young because it has been forgotten, new because it is universal. It is the light lyric romance of the theater; it is nepenthe—and renewal.

And, if these things are so, isn't it needed?

Even grandfather should join the Post-Impressionist and here highly resolve that the operetta shall not have been revived in vain—that its combination of adventure and melody shall have a long lease of life—and that, indeed, its wedding of love and laughter shall never perish from the earth.

Fair Enough

Back From The Hinterland.

New York, Oct. 9.

BACK-COUNTRY is America, too, and it's much more interested in the World Series than in Europe's trouble.

It is a good thing to get away from the New York-New England region now and again to rediscover that other sections of the country are inhabited by a distinctly different breed of cats. This is suggested by recent experience at the World Series in Detroit and Chicago. The crowds were largely local in both cities, but in each case the show sucked in considerable numbers of Americans from a large area around and about.

As to whether they were merchants, employes, farmers or just what, there was no way to learn without taking a census. At any rate, they seemed to be in funds and their mood was happy. They are a noisier lot when helling around at night than the Eastern gay dogs, and they get drunker and act the fool with greater abandon when it comes time to lead the orchestra or beat the drums in the night clubs. There were few dinner jackets in sight and fewer sables and minks.

• • • •

A MARKED outward difference which can not fail to be noticed by anyone who lives in the East is that there are comparatively few who have the "foreign" appearance. I would rather not describe the "foreign" appearance because it would be a generality too sweeping and make too many people sore. Nevertheless, these people on the streets and in all crowds give an impression of being homogeneous, whereas a crowd in a New York subway or a big popular theater, for example, retains very distinct European or, anyway, alien characteristics. I am not arguing just now whether or not this is something which should be corrected. That has been taken up in a serious, not to say, grim, way by many of our heavy-duty thinkers many a time without decisive results. This is merely a report of an impression.

Eastern people do a lot of brooding over foreign affairs, which are matters of much less interest to their fellow-countrymen elsewhere. The back countrymen seem to give very little thought to the plight of the Jews in Germany or the Catholics in Mexico. And the outbreak of the war in Abyssinia, after all these months of name-calling and you're-anothering, left them cold.

The papers were full of World Series, and the first move of the Italian army had a hard time obtaining space next to pure reading matter on page one. For the most part it was hidden back among the goiter cures and electric belts, whereas the Eastern papers of the same day, when they arrived by plane, were suffering from the shrieking meemies over the war.

Their pages were black with the old 1914 war type, and, inasmuch as news judgment generally follows popular interest rather than trying to lead it around by a nose ring, the difference in the papers may be thought to reflect the difference in interests. A small allowance may be made for the very special character of the World Series.

• • • •

PROBABLY the extraordinary interest of the Eastern people in foreign affairs is due to the fact that when immigration comes from Europe it tends to pile up at the point where it comes ashore or thereabouts. In that sense, as well as geographically, the East is closer to Europe and Europe's wars, racial hatreds, persecutions and other interests.

I tried to draw people into discussions of the Olympic games and the Nazis' mistreatment of the Jews. They were not interested one way or another. As reasonable people and Americans they thought it pretty rotten that one man should be voted the power of life, death and destiny over a big nation which has many sound, enviable traits. And, of course, they didn't think the Jews should be abused.

But, to them, Germany was a foreign country a long way off and anything that happened there was Germany's own business. More interesting than that, they were just uninterested. They hadn't given the matter any thought and were not steamed up. Any attempt to inflict the same conditions on this country—their country—would call for steps, but until then, wasn't that a whale of a catch that Galan made in the fourth? They were equally indifferent to communism.

• • • •

STRUCK me that in the East we hear a great volume of noise from people, eminent and otherwise, who are constantly lathering themselves over European problems and, by sheer persistency and loudness, compel us to think of these things more than is good for us, to the neglect of domestic business. Anyway, the back country is America, too, and, judging by what I take to be the popular attitude, will not be drawn into any rows on the other side.

On the Mississippi River the hitching bolts to which the steamboats tie up along the shore are held fast in the ground by great concrete blocks weighing tons and buried 6 feet deep. These blocks are called Dead Men. This country is tied up to a huge dead man which will not pull out without an enormous amount of tugging.

Mrs. Hemans

By William Lyon Phelps

THE present year is the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Felicia Hemans (pronounced Hemmons), who died in Dublin in 1835, at the age of 41 years, having been born at Liverpool, September 25, 1793. Her maiden name was Felicia Dorothea Brown. She was married in 1812 to Capt. Alfred Hemans, and they lived near St. Asaph, in North Wales. They had five children in five years; then they separated and never met again, though they wrote letters to each other about the children.

• • • •

She was a friend of Wordsworth and an intimate friend of Sir Walter Scott, who wrote an epilogue for her play; which, however, did not save it. Her loneliness and seclusion were redeemed by a continuous series of volumes of verse; and she had the satisfaction of becoming a very popular writer. Her first volume of poems was published when she was only 14; and a few years before her death there was an edition of her Poetical Works.

When I was a boy, her poem called "The Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers" was a favorite piece for school declamation everywhere; thousands of boys knew it by heart:

The breaking waves dashed high
On a stern and rock-bound coast,
And the woods, against a stormy sky,
Their giant branches tossed.

• • • •

I supposed of course she was an American writing patriotic verse; and I was very much surprised when I found she was an English woman.

Her poem Casablanca, beginning

The boy stood on the burning deck,

had already when I was a child become hackneyed through repetition; and there were an immense number of parodies, of which the most popular was:

The boy stood on the burning deck,
Eating peanuts by the peck,
His father called, he would not go,
Because he loved the peanuts so.

New York's Decibels

Anti-Noise Campaign Gets Under Way With A Bang, But Usual Pandemonium Still Reigns Despite 1,400 Police Warnings On First Night; Planetarium Alone Offers Silence.

By Ralph E. Renaud.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

NEW YORK'S widely-trumpeted antinoise campaign got under way with a bang this week. It was announced, though not by prearrangement, by six salutes from Uncle Sam's 16-inch guns at Fort Tilden which, somewhat unfortunately, had chosen Wednesday, the city's first day of silence, for a round of practice. New York hasn't had a louder noise for years—not since the Black Tom explosions, in fact. But everybody thought it was the mayor asking for quiet, please; so it was all right.

The truth of the matter is that it is not so easy to shush a big city. Silent civic machinery has not yet been invented and exists only in the imagination, like Mr. Roosevelt's perfect state. An anti-noise campaign is an excellent talking point and something which no right-minded citizen can oppose, being in that respect like any sharp attack of reform. But the only thing which could make New York really quiet would be a near-by Vesuvius which could cover it with 25 feet of ashes, as Pompeii was covered. Even then all the high buildings would stick up like Towers of Babel to testify to the mingling of voices which makes the city what it is.

On the first night of the antinoise campaign the gentle rain from Heaven descended and helped out the campaigners a little by keeping people off the streets. But the subways roared just as loudly underfoot and the radios blared just as brazenly within doors. A lot of people, by the way, especially young folks, no longer listen to the radio but keep their sets turned on to drown the emptiness of their own conversation. It fills in a social hiatus quite effectively.

THE police served approximately 1,400 warnings on noisy parties, honking motorists and volunteer street troubadours who happened to be feeling merry. The decibels grew fainter and fainter and finally almost complete silence fell out toward Coney Island. There the season is over and the stillness was broken only by the roar of the breakers—which is regarded as an act of God, and consequently outside the law. One policeman in that deserted village reported that he regarded the hissing of the clams as an infraction of the new ordinances, but he didn't know how to stop them.

In view of this temporary triumph of peace over pandemonium it is distressing to report that the next day New York was just as noisy as ever.

However, there is now one place in the city where almost absolute silence reigns—a silence of awe and wonder. It is in the new Hayden Planetarium which has just been opened as a fascinating adjunct to the American Museum of Natural History. There are three others in the United States and about 18 more in the rest of the world. City life doesn't breed familiarity with the heavens but it looks now as though astronomy and the courses of the stars were going to be the most popular subject in New York this winter.

• • • •

THE planetarium is a miracle. A 75-foot dome of iron is made to dissolve into the immensity of the cosmos itself with the majestic procession of the heavenly luminaries submissive to a lecturer's wand. Time itself seems to be under control, for the skies can be shown as they were 10,000 years ago or as they will be 10,000 years hence. At the touch of a button the constellations are revealed as they marched above the eyes of the cave men gazing into the starry night from the mouths of their dens; as they circled for the Chaldeans on their clay towers and first suggested the science of astronomy; as they gathered about the bright Star of Bethlehem, or as they paused on the Ides of March to see Caesar fall.

The spectator, in an imaginary space ship, can be taken anywhere on earth at any speed desired, up to that of light itself. He may view the Southern Cross shining as brilliantly as the Big Dipper. As a matter of fact, Admiral Byrd, at one of the previews, took his audience to the South Pole and lectured on the heavens as they appeared from his solitary hut among the snows.

• • • •

ONLY 4,500 stars and planets are thrown on the dome, for that is the number which the human eye can readily distinguish, but the effect is that the countless millions twinkling in the deep blue darkness. The extraordinary contrivance which accomplishes this looks like an oversized dumbbell swung on a pivot in the middle, one end of which projects the northern heavens and one the southern. The elaborate mechanism which distinguishes the movements of the planets, the sun and moon from those of the fixed stars is far beyond the comprehension of your correspondent, but it works with an accuracy, a speed and an illusion which is startling. A year in the skies, for purpose of illustration, is reduced to three minutes, and all the changes which occur are condensed within that narrow limit. It takes only the turn of a switch to roll the heavens back or forward to any given year. Even the Milky Way, that outer edge of swirling galaxy, streams across the dome in perfect simulation.

When the Chicago Fair was opened it was accomplished with a beam from the star Arcturus, which had been 100,000 years on its travels toward the earth. That was supposed to be the last word in scientific astonishment of the popular mind, but the planetarium used something even more mysterious. It reached out and harnessed the cosmic rays, that extraordinary radiation which originates somewhere in outer space among the vast interstices between the nebulae and bombards our globe with a power which carries it unobstructed through several feet of solid lead. The rays which operated the switch opening the planetarium passed right through the bodies of every spectator present as though they were but shadow shapes, chattered a moment in the tube which trapped them, and then revealed the sudden glory from which they had come.

ONE of the meanest hoaxes yet revealed in this city of chiselers and racketeers was perpetrated at the Artists Outdoor Show which has just closed in Greenwich Village. On the last day a seedy but impressive individual showed up, professing a keen appreciation of art, and proceeded to buy in pictures right and left, as he announced, "for the American collection of Lord Russell." He cheerfully paid out checks in any amount asked and specified that all pictures were to be delivered to the Dudensing Galleries, a highly respectable Fifth avenue institution. Occasionally he said he was buying for "Lord Renfrew," which, even artists know is the title used by the Prince of Wales in his lighter moments. One of the crueler aspects of the hoax was that this agent of royalty bought the entire output of the most competent man in the show, thus closing him off from other sales.

Of course, there is no "Lord Russell," and the checks were of a peculiarly elastic quality of rubber.

Daily Oil Output Off 43,600 Barrels

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States decreased 43,600 barrels in the week ended October 5, totaling 2,719,600 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates.

Daily average production east of California decreased 38,000 barrels, to 2,092,100 barrels.

Don't Mention It.

Unionism

As Argued By "The Nation"

United Mine Workers' Victory.

THE victory of the United Mine Workers, who won a $90,000,000 wage increase after a perfectly mobilized strike, is first of all the success of bread-and-butter unionism. John L. Lewis can boast that he has increased the wages of his bituminous workers by $350,000,000 in three years, and so has demonstrated to his membership that their union, from a purely business standpoint, is a remarkably profitable investment. His latest victory was possible because of his authority in the negotiations with the coal operators, and because when the strike was called it was completely effective. It was also the result of several other important factors, not the least of them being that the operators were unable to force their conflict into the White House and enlist the President as arbitrator. The President left negotiations where they belonged as long as the public interest was not more seriously jeopardized, in the Department of Labor, and there Assistant Secretary McGrady conducted them with signal skill. The coal operators, with lively memories of the President's intervention in the automobile crisis, had relied on their access to him when it came to resisting the union demands. Like most employers, they counted on Government help when management faced a victory of its workers. But the coal strike was an economic struggle such as the Supreme Court has blessed. So the President wisely refrained from intervention and the strike was quickly won. The terms of the victory are not generous. The average annual income of miners is still low. The six-hour day is still to be won. But the union now is assured of 18 months of an improved standard of life, and can go into the experiment of reorganizing the bituminous-coal industry with renewed courage and prestige.

• • • •

THIS victory, on the eve of the American Fedtion of Labor Convention at Atlantic City, brings to that meeting a message both of warning and of hope. It was a bread-and-butter victory, and the A. F. of L. is the stronghold of the bread-and-butter doctrine. But it was significantly something more, a victory of an industrial union on a scale that no craft union is able to duplicate in present-day America. John L. Lewis comes to Atlantic City as the most successful American labor leader of his time. He also is the outstanding critic of the federation's paralysis in organizing industrial unions in modern mass-production industries. He can demonstrate that the industrial union is a better instrument than the craft union for winning wage-and-hour victories. He also knows that the industrial union is the one hope of organizing and uniting labor in this country and giving it something like equal power as against management under modern conditions. We imagine that the rank and file of the craft unions would not be unresponsive to this persuasion, but the bureaucracy of the federation will be hard to convert. The success of industrial unionism would mean a new deal in the federation; it would mean that the power of the bureaucracy would pass to others. Though it is essential that there be a new deal and that the power should pass, the craft-union control will not be surrendered without a conflict.

• • • •

LEWIS' victory is a warning that the conflict is now at hand. He towers above other leaders in the labor movement, and with his union solidly behind him and with ample financial resources, he must be understood as promising that the industrial union will come into its own, either through the A. F. of L. or without it. If the federation could lift its eyes from minor considerations and look to the plight of American workers in the machine age, it would see that the craft principle, however logical historically, is now a menace to labor as a whole. In the United Mine Workers the A. F. of L. possesses an experienced army, with plenty of staff officers to organize new industrial unions in a way the federation itself is unable to do. And within the federation are enough industrial unions, such as the needle trades, the lumber workers, and the brewery workers, around which newly organized industrial unions could rally. Here would be the nucleus of a genuine labor movement. Instead of groping forward toward this opportunity, the federation chiefs intend at Atlantic City to whittle down the San Francisco resolution committinf them to organize new industrial unions. They are preparing to retreat from the compromise position they reluctantly adopted last year. For this reason Lewis in his new strength will stand as a warning which, for the sake of preserving the federation, we can only hope will be heeded.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

What! No Flag Waving?

These are tough war days for Mr. and Mrs. Chesty Strutters. You remember the Strutters, of course. They could always be depended on in the old days to bob up in some "international incident" during a foreign war and demand that the United States send them a fleet at once.

• • • •

Whenever there was a war anywhere Chesty would wade right into it with his pajamas, camera, loud voice and military brushes and announce that he was an American citizen entitled to stand in a heavy barrage and not be inconvenienced.

• • • •

In all wars, however distant, the greatest danger to peace at home was that some American would wrap himself in a flag, make himself a general nuisance, and get Congress all hot and bothered over the rights of an American citizen.

• • • •

And we rather liked it. It made us feel important and powerful.

• • • •

But Washington has announced, believe it or not, that the Army and Navy cannot be regarded as first aids to rash tourists, and that even should a couple of Americans be on a ship shelled, torpedoed or otherwise ruined in the war zone it would not be up to the United States to begin loading troopships.

• • • •

From now on if an American is foolhardy enough to insist upon his right to defy a hurricane in a canoe he will have no reason to regard it as an international incident if his hat is blown off.

• • • •

This will be humiliating enough to many old-timers, but what will cause even more chagrin is the President's warning that American merchants will trade with combatants at their own risk and that freedom of the seas now becomes a mere phrase from school histories.

• • • •

It may have been all right to be bellicose and blustery back in the days when great nations respected convenants, were jealous of their integrity and realized that certain conduct wasn't cricket.

• • • •

But a man visiting a war zone today and expecting any regard for his rights would be like an infant going by baby-carriage into a running battle between gangsters and cooing, "Lissen, if anything happens to me you will hear from my nurse."

Exchange Head Warns Against Inflation Peril

Position Is Sound, Says Gay, But Danger Is Insidious.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Oct. 9.—In an address to the American Management Association tonight, Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, issued a warning against the dangers of inflation and its insidious approaches. After defining the public as the exchange's greatest client and describing that vast body of investors and speculators as "a Gargantuan entity, often maladroit, given to extremes of gloom and of optimism, myriad minded, unorganized and financially powerful beyond all estimate," Mr. Gay said in part:

"To put it bluntly, the exchange is concerned with inflation. I shall not attempt to add one more definition of the word "inflation" to those already in existence, for in the case of securities, if in no other case, we do not need a definition to recognize the fact, or the likelihood of the fact. Inflation in the stock market occurs when prices advance to a level at which they lose all reasonable relationship to fundamental values. In all modern instances, this condition has been accompanied by the extravagant use of bank credit.

A Distortion of Values.

"Inflation, then, as far as the stock market is concerned, is a distortion of values, bringing in its train heavy losses to the individual investor and a shock to business. I do not concede for a moment that the rise and collapse of a speculative boom is the cause of business depression. The principal causes are to be found in conditions over which the stock exchange has little influence or control. A self-induced smash in stock market prices, following an exaggerated speculation, might be, however, a calamity in its own right.

"I am not predicting that stock prices will become inflated I recognize, however, that the stock market provides an inviting field where this might occur, largely bacause of that ready marketability which under normal conditions, as I said before, is such a benefit to business. Here we can have inflation in an insidiously pleasant form, under the guise of visible, day-by-day 'profits.'

"I would like to say here, parenthetically, that one thin spot in our tire casing is caused by the unscientific income tax imposed on capital gains. Innumerable instances have come to my attention where investors have been deterred from selling securities and taking their profits because of their unwillingness to share so large a portion of those profits with the Government. Thus, at a time when the number of buyers is unduly stimulated, the number of those who would naturally be sellers is artificially restricted. Surtaxes upon capital gains and trading profits are a potent secondary cause of stock market inflation, leading inevitably to ensuing stock market depression.

Chief Danger in Banking.

"The principal danger, however, lies entirely outside of the mechanism of the stock exchange. It is to be found in the banking situation, which is characterized by unprecedentedly low money rates and by the greatest surplus reserves ever recorded. The ineffectiveness of these rates and these reserves is eloquent testimony to the state of shattered confidence and of subnormal business activity through which we have been passing. With business today at a far lower level than in 1929, it is unpleasant to contemplate the consequences of a runaway stock market inflation. In this early stage of economic convalescence the country cannot afford to permit a dangerous inflation in security prices, from whatever cause it may arise.

"As yet, so far as I can see, we have no evidences of any inflation in stocks due to the overuse of credit. And, mind you, I am not attempting to pass judgment on present market prices. From a peak of $8,549,000,000 in 1929, New York Stock Exchange member borrowings on collateral declined to $242,000,000 in 1932, a fall of 97.2 per cent. Since 1932 they have increased only $530,000,000, while the total value of all stocks and bonds listed on the New York Stock Exchange has advanced from $50,469,000,000 to $78,862,000,000.

Amazing Financial Feat.

"Let me say, in passing, that I consider this liquidation of brokers' loans one of the most amazing feats in financial history. It is evidence that our financial markets do provide the facility whereby cash may be obtained at any time. Though the record was one of continually declining prices there must have been numberless cases where illiquid holdings of property were conserved through this ability to secure cash.

"The position today is entirely sound, from the standpoint of credit directly employed in the security markets. It should be kept so. I am not an alarmist, but we should not close our eyes to the inflammability of the material we are dealing with and to the fact that inflation, if it should once get started, might sweep through the markets as a fire sweeps through a city of wooden houses.

"It is advisable, therefore, that we take stock of our financial firefighting apparatus and of the system of inspection and of policing which is relied upon to keep a conflagration from getting started."

New York, Oct. 9.—The short interest outstanding on the New York stock Exchange at the opening of business on September 30 was 913,620 shares, a decline of 85,252 shares from the end of August.

The decrease was the first recorded since May, when the short position dropped 4,031 shares. It followed rises of 72,338 in June, 30,276 in July and 128,059 in August.

Cost of Living 3.1% Higher Than Last Year

Food, Rent, Clothing and Coal Continue to Advance.

New York, Oct. 9.—The cost of living of wage-earners in the United States again advanced substantially, according to the National Industrial Conference Board. An increase of 0.6 per cent from August to September raised living costs 3.1 per cent above the level of September, 1934, and 16.8 per cent above the low of April, 1933. Living costs in September, however, were still 17.2 per cent lower than in September, 1929.

Food prices rose 1.3 per cent from August to September. In September of this year they were 6.1 per cent higher than in September of last year and 37 per cent higher than in April, 1933, although still 23 per cent below their level of September, 1929.

Rents continued their upward trend, advancing 0.8 per cent from August to September. This rise made them 9.2 per cent higher than in September, 1934, and 15 per cent higher than at the begining of 1934, when their low point was reached, but still 21.9 per cent lower than in September, 1929.

Clothing prices increased slightly, 0.1 per cent, from August to September, the first advance since a year ago. Since the low point of 1933, clothing prices have advanced 22.4 per cent. Since September, 1934, however, there has been a reduction in clothing prices of 4.3 per cent and since September, 1929, a decline of 24.6 per cent.

Coal prices advanced 1.2 per cent from August to September, slightly less than seasonally. They were 3.3 per cent lower than in September, 1934, and 9.3 per cent lower than in September, 1929.

The cost of sundries remained the same in September as in August, but it was 0.8 per cent higher than in September, 1934, and 4.3 per cent higher than in April, 1933.

Electric Power Output Reaches All-Time High

Production for Past 12 Months Surpasses 5-Year Mark.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 9.—An all-time high in electric power production for the week ended last Saturday was announced today by the Edison Electric Institute.

Output last week was 1,863,483,000 kilowatt-hours, a record which topped the banner week of December 21, 1929, when the industry produced 1,860,021,000 kilowatt-hours.

For several weeks power production has been nearing the record of boom years, and an increase last week of 0.3 of 1 per cent over the previous week pushed the output over the top.

Individual utilities have pushed power to peaks in recent months, and the North American Co. reported today that during the third quarter of this year its power output was the greatest in the history of the company's subsidiaries, a gain of 14 per cent over the 1934 third quarter.

For the year ended September 30, North America's production was about 1 per cent over the previous 12-month record for the corresponding period in 1929-30.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Move Irregularly in Dullest Trading of Five Weeks—Government Bonds Droop—Foreign Currncies Rise—Wheat Sags.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Oct. 9.—Hesitation and irregularity invaded the securities market, but no bad breaks occurred. In the last hour stocks managed to improve a little. Turnover was well under a million shares, the smallest since the end of August. Government bonds dropped, as did grains, but cotton was steady. December wheat closed ½ cent lower at 104⅞ cents a bushel.

In the early trading railroad stocks were the weakest as a group. Little has taken place to encourage the buying of that section, and speculators feel that the opportunity for short turns is better among the utilities or industrials. For a long time the railroad share market has been a narrow affair. No more than three or four stocks have kept in front. One of them, Union Pacific, was especially weak today. It lost 3 or 4 points at its worst. Great Northern was down a point. Pittsburgh & West Virginia sank 2 points on one sale.

Utilities Advance.

Fractionally lower prices on small volume were the rule for the motors and accessories, amusements, equipments, coppers, tobaccos and steels. Store shares were firm. Rubbers were lower, with the exception of Firestone. National Biscuit and United Fruit were weak with other food shares. Coca-Cola reached a new record high price on running up 2 points. Continental Can climbed a point or so on the lifting of the dividend rate. Large gains were made by Shattuck, Collins & Aikman, Eitigon Schild and Food Machinery.

Most of the public utilities were higher. Gas, Public Service and North American led. Telephone sold off a little. Most of the chemicals recovered. Monsanto, which lately has moved against the trend, ran to form and yielded to profit-taking. Mail orders were firm. General Electric was up a little, while Westinghouse declined.

Reversal in Exchange.

Foreign exchange trading was marked by a sharp reversal in the flow of rates. Gold currencies stiffened, with the slackening of the capital flight to this country, and sterling jumped. The sudden advance in sterling was accompanied by rumors that the United States Treasury has resumed large-scale purchases of silver in London and needed pounds with which to pay for them.

The silver market was dull and unchanged here and in London, which did not suggest that this country had started another buying movement if, indeed, it ever ended its previous buying campaign. Only one thing appears certain: at the rate gold has been coming lately the Treasury instead of making progress has been pushed away from its goal despite the tons of white metal it has acquired to carry out a law which imposes an impossible task.

Assuming that the flow of gold may slacken materially, in the event of an early end to the hostilities in Africa, enough has come to insure a sharp rise in excess reserves of the banks, once the late year currency expansion subsides. Demand for bank credit, from business man and speculator alike, is still comparatively small, which perhaps is less a bear point on trade than it is an assurance that no appreciable rise in money rates is likely for some time.

In spite of the slack money rates, bonds are growing hesitant. That is largely because of the low yields and, as regards Government bonds, the feeling that no lack of such issues is in sight. At the moment, it is said Treasury support has lessened, but it is not within reason that with so much further borrowing to do the Treasury will allow the market to fall far.

Trade Increase.

Stocks are halted temporarily no doubt by the cautiousness of buyers who prefer to examine more closely the scope of autumn business activity. At just what point stock prices sufficiently reflect company earnings, no one can say; but allowing for premature and belated starts and stops, the direction of markets can be counted upon to follow business. Trade trends now are upward, for all the obstacles encountered, and that is doubtless the reason why investors do not appear to be distributing their market positions. Speculators go in and out with the changing news of the day, on hunches and for no reasons at all.

Direct Relief To Continue, Nice Believes

End of Federal Dole Set for Nov. 1 When WPA Takes Over.

Jobless to Be Cared for Beyond that Date, Says Governor.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 9.—Although Federal dole is scheduled to be abandoned November 1 when work-relief projects assume the relief burden, Gov. Harry W. Nice today, in voicing satisfaction with President Roosevelt's Works ProgressAdministration, expressed the conviction that Washington would continue direct relief until the unemployed are provided work by the WPA program.

"The allocation to the State of relief funds, I am sure, will not be discontinued by President Roosevelt except as the employables now on relief roles are transferred. The speed with which this transfer is made depends upon the quickness with which State projects are approved by the Federal Government and the money for the projects placed at the disposal of State agencies. The State government through its agencies will proceed with the work as the money is placed at its disposal."

Roosevelt in Accord.

"I know the President is desirous of putting the unemployed on work projects and in this we are in hearty accord. As I see it now, there is no discord between the State and Federal government. On the contrary, both are co-operating and the only thing necessary, probably, is the doing away with unnecessary formalities in order that actual work can be adequately gotten under day and this is being accomplished by the Maryland United States Senators in co-operation with the Federal Government."

"My citizens committee, headed by Mr. Howard Bruce, Maryland Democratic national committeeman; Mr. Joseph P. Healy, BERC official, and Mr. George Radcliffe, U. S. Senator of Maryland, are co-operating closely."

55 Per Cent for PWA.

Maryland will provide for its needy by appropriating 55 per cent of the funds for PWA work; by quick payment of old age pensions, the old age funds being provided for by the 1 per cent gross receipts tax which also raised funds for direct relief and for the PWA, and by allocating funds for the State highway commission.

To date Francis Dryden, WPA administrator for Maryland, has received but $4,000,000 of the $60,000,000 Maryland WPA construction program which awaits final approval in Washington. The citizens committee of 30 members, appointed by Gov. Nice to contact national WPA officials, have made efforts to cut the red tape so that the funds for Maryland are released in time for those on dole to earn wages as direct relief ceases.

Cut Due Today In Apple Rates, Valley Learns

Rate Reduction to Apply on Shipments Made to Southeast.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 9.—New emergency rates on apples from this section of the Shenandoah Valley to southeastern territory will be effective tomorrow, according to information received here today.

On the basis of a carload minimum of 30,000 pounds, the rate reduction is applicable to points in the south on and east of a line from Nashville to Birmingham, along the Southern Railway to Mobile. The Florida peninsula is not included.

Rates from Martinsburg and Paw Paw, Va., and Hancock, Md., will be published later.

The new rates on a 100-pound basis have also been listed from many points in this State to markets in Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and northern Florida.

W. S. Campfield, of Staunton, secretary of the Virginia State Horticultural Society, has declared that the reduction authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission on apples in 30,000-pound shipments from Virginia is equivalent to about 35 per cent. Classed as an emergency measure, the rate schedule may not be in effect after this season. The reduction was made with a view of increasing shipment of apples by rail.

Shipment of low grade apples by truck has had an adverse effect on the market in the South, according to Campfield.

Wires Slow Work On Nice Mansion

New Electric SystemFound Needed at Annapolis.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Oct. 9.—The delay thus far in completing renovation of the executive mansion is partially attributable to condemned electrical wiring which had to be replaced before other work could progress, Gov. Harry W. Nice said today.

After repair work began, the executive asserted, the entire wire system was found to be dangerous and might have destroyed the mansion by fire had not it been for the present reconstruction. He said the laying of plaster and other materials was held up several weeks until a new electrical system had been installed.

The Governor expressed satisfaction with all phases of the repairs, which have slowly transferred the gubernatorial house into a colonial structure.

$1,500,000 Bonds Sold In Maryland

N. Y. Syndicate Buys Issue at Interest of 2.12 Per Cent.

Deal Shows Credit of State Stands High, Nice Declares.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 9.—The State of Maryland announced today the sale of a $1,500,000 issue of 3 per cent bonds, the third batch of certificates sold from the State's $8,500,000 bond issue, to a financial syndicate headed by Halsey, Stuart & Co., New York City, for 107.435 value.

In announcing the sale, Gov. Harry W. Nice said: "The prices received by bonds sold by the State since the adjournment of the Legislature has been greater than any heretofore sold at the same rate of interest. It shows that the credit of Maryland stands high in the country with a yield of 2.12 per cent for this issue, 1.85 per cent for a previous issue and the first sale yielding about 2.10 per cent."

Although the bonds sold are slightly below the record highs obtained in the two previous issuances, the State will be enabled to use the money at an interest of 2.12 per cnt.

Will Meet Deficits.

The certificates purchased today are a part of the $8,500,000 bond issue passed by the recent Legislature to create a working capital for the State treasury and meet deficits that may occur. Two previous sales were made, one on April 15 with $5,500,000 of 3 per cent bonds placed on the market for 107.699, or a yield of 2.09 per cent; and the other on August 15 with $855,000 of per cent bonds disposed of at 109.8133, or a yield of 1.85 per cent.

The total amount of the legislative bond issue bought by financial concerns to date is $7,855,000, with $645,000 awaiting a sale before the entire lump bond issue is on the market.

Works Board Holds Sale.

The State board of public works, represented today by Gov. Nice, State Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., and State Treasurer Hooper S. Miles, conducted the sale with 11 other financial groups bidding for the $1,500,000 issue. The second closest bidder was the Alexander Brown & Sons, of Baltimore, offering 107.2099. The bonds sold will be delivered October 15 to the New York concern.

The successful bidders represented seven financial houses comprised of the Banca-America-Blair Corporation, Ladenburg, Thalman & Co., Hamphill, Noyes & Co., Adams, McEntee and Co., Inc., B. J. Van Ingen & Co. and the Shields & Co., all of New York City, and the Stern Bros. Co., of Kansas City, Mo.

Asylum Aid Says Inquiry Was Halted

Board of Managers Had Ordered Own Probe, Member Asserts.

Says State Commission Asked Quiz Be Stopped to Avoid Conflict.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 9.—C. Wilbur Miller, a member of the board of managers of the Springfield State Hospital for the Insane, said today that an investigation into charges of brutality at the institution was under way when it was stopped at the request of the State survey commission.

The commission returned a report yesterday charging brutality and favoritism at the institution, located at Sykesville.

Miller said that he and Dr. George H. Preston were carrying on the investigation. He was representing the board of managers, while Dr. Preston represented the board of mental hygiene. The probe was ordered by the two boards, Miller said.

Several attendants at the hospital had been called before Miller and Dr. Preston when the survey commission asked them to halt their probe, Miller said.

He added that members of the commission informed him that it was interfering with the inquiry being conducted by the commission. Beng unwilling to hamper a body formed primarily to make investigations, Miller said, the investigation of the two boards was stopped.

In commenting on the report Miller said that he had been a minority member of the board for more than 15 years. As a minority member, he said, he was not placed on any committees.

It was learned today that the board of managers will bold a meeting on Sunday at the institution. The report of the commission is expected to be discussed, but no comprehensive answer to it is expected to be drafted at that time.

Curtis Enters Stafford Attorneyship Race.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 9.—Two political announcements were made today when Sheriff Maxie L. Blaydes, of Spotsylvania County, announced he would again seek the office and L. R. R. Curtis, Stafford County lawyer, announced for the Stafford Commonwealth's attorneyship.

Sheriff Blaydes, who was elected four years ago and took part in solving the Battlefield Park murder case and the "well murder" of Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Coleman, will oppose Lee Edenton, Democrat.

Curtis will oppose G. B. Wallace, Democrat. Curtis was defeated some years ago by Wallace, after having held the position for four years.

Gallico

Sees Goslin Due To Grace Bench; Mikal Now a Sub

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Goose Goslin, the New Jersey cranberry farmer who heroed for the Tigers, may not be a regular in '36 . . . Huey Long's pet, Abe Mikal, is just a Louisiana State substitute now. He made three all-Americans . . . Rassling magnates have uncovered a "champion of Ethiopia." His tag is King Kong and he usually gets his konk knocked off by garlic-chewing sons of Caesar . . . Last year's snow is still to be seen under Dartmouth Stadium . . . Bill Terry and little Jimmy are now palsy-walsies. At the series Bill told us he had a long pow-wow with Branch Rickey of the Cards and the first winter deal will be between the Giants and that club. Bill is now touring the tall celery lining up spring exhibitions . . . Travis Jackson is hunting quail at Waldo, Ark. . . . Mel Ott postcards from a Gulf of Mexico fishing trip. Carl Hubbell spends half his time shooting the tail feathers off mallards unlucky enough to cruise near Meeker, Okla.; the other half he spends chucking his brand new baby under the chin and teaching it to gurgle "Poppa."

Billy Herman has gone home to ride his pinto pony over the sagebrush of his San Antonio ranch. Mrs. Herman pots wriggling water snakes from the hip; she once killed a buzzard with a quick draw and bead of her .38 six-shooter . . . When we were in Chicago last week a gal reporter asked Bachelor Ted Lyons whether he liked blondes or brunettes. Ted eyed the titian tresses of the little honey and piped: "I like blondes, brunettes and red heads!"

Cleverest substitute for razz berry is "Bronx banzai," coined by Herb Graffis . . . Pro football Giants in a drenching Boston rain drew 9,500 paid admissions. This Sunday's game with the Dodgers will outdraw any college in the city by 10,000. Ned Irish figgers the take will be 40,000 . . . Pardon our childish college spirit but the old Alma Mater Marquette has a hell of a back in this baby, Cuff. Steven Owen says he can step into the National League any afternoon . . . The announcer at Pittsburgh chop-sueyed his English in describing a triple pass which involved one Irish gentleman and two former Fordham Poles. He bellowed: "Danowski to Sarausky to Clansky."

JOE LOUIS is ducking Tony Galento. Joe's afraid Tony might connect with a lucky punch and the purse wouldn't be worth the chance. . . . Tris Speaker, Babe Ruth and Charles Dressen at the series watched the coaches and positions of base runners' feet. They called the turn on plays nine times out of ten. . . . A fist fight between Ken Stronk and Ernie Pinckert on the steps leading to the Fenway Park dressing room ended when Ken landed two smacking rights to the chin. . . . N. Y. U. basket ball team will open the season at the Garden December 18 against the University of California Bears. . . . Notre Dame, yet to sign, will pass up Army for a crack at the champion Violets.

Charles Grimm, now butchering 30 hogs on his farm, says he did not feel bad blowing the series until his little daughter 'phoned from school and said, "Don't cry, daddy." Grimm says he cried a bit then. . . . Dr. Alex Alekhine permitted his mascot, a huge white tomcat, to sniff the board for luck before each of his world championship chess matches at Amsterdam. . . . Joe Cronin is a miniature Paul Whiteman, and may shift himself to third because of the added weight. . . . Scout Eddie Goostree, who discovered Schoolboy Rowe, said minor league salaries dipped as low as $75 a month this summer. . . . Helen Jacobs is now magazine writing under the name of Helen Hull.

Bill Werber, in Dutch for sassing his boss, will be traded . . . Iowa has a good team. Elmer Layden told us last week. We'd like to see Colgate take 'em, but don't get overboard betting on the East.

Sleepy Jim Crowley is our pal and we hope his Rams beat Purdue, but the Boilermakers have not lost an Atlantic seaboard game since Noble Kizer became coach in '30. Watch that Cecil Isbell, Jim. He runs like a scared jack rabbit . . . Chicago has a tackle named Woodrow Wilson. Notre Dame has Staten Island's pride, William Shakespeare. Northwestern's varsity end is Henry W. Longfellow . . . Cochrane and Hartnett both agreed that Umpire Bill McGowan did not miss a play or call one ball or strike wrong in the entire World Series. As a Cub rooter, and Irishman to Irishman—Boo to you, Moriarty!

Mt. Jackson to Face S.V.A. in First Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., Oct. 9.—The Mount Jackson Athletic Club eleven will open their season tomorrow when they clash with the Shenandoah Valley Academy gridders at Winchester. The Mount Jackson team is one of the lightest for many years, but a shifty back field and fast linesmen gives the team a bright outlook on the current season.

The Mount Jackson team that will start the game according to Coach Shannon will be as follows:

Ends, G. Stoneburner and Shannon; tackles, T. Stoneburner and Bobo; guards, Tysinger and Clark; center, Allen; quarter back, Payne; half backs, Eckland and Ruby, and full back, Fadley.

Miss Faunce Also Upset In Match

Helen Dettweiler Downs Champ With Birdie on 17th Hole.

Miss Harper Is Victor Over Mrs. Mackenzie; Semifinals Today.

By Dave Herman.

TWO favorites, one of them the defending titleholder, Mrs. David Clark, of Army and Navy Country Club; the other, Miss Winifred Faunce, of Manor, District champion, were eliminated in the quarter-finals of the Middle Atlantic golf championship at Congressional Country Club yesterday.

Helen Dettweiler, 19-year-old Congressional star, who can hit a tee shot as far as any woman in the country with the probable exception of Babe Didrikson, effected the downfall of Mrs. Clark by 2 and 1 in the day's biggest surprise.

In a mild upset, Mrs. Boyd Morrow, of Elkridge Club, Baltimore, defeated Miss Faunce, 1 up, when the District queen of the links 3-putted the last green, climax of a heart-throbbing hole-for-hole battle.

Lily Harper, Portsmouth, Va., fresh from her second straight triumph in the Old Dominion championship last week in Richmond, blossomed out with another fine exhibition of shotmaking to remove Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, wife of the host club professional, 2 and 1.

Wins, 6 and 4.

The other semifinalist is Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, of Indian Spring, who conquered Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, of Baltimore Country Club, 6 and 4, to pile up the largest margin in the championship flight second-round matches.

Thus this morning Miss Dettweiler will engage Mrs. Morrow, two-time Middle Atlantic champion, who only recently emerged from temporary retirement, and Miss Harper will meet Mrs. Meckley. The first match will start at 10 o'clock, the second, ten minutes later.

Miss Dettweiler is making her first real bid for Middle Atlantic honors. She failed to qualify last year. Mrs. Meckley, who had a dismal medal round, only to come through with a sparkling 79, 1 under women's par, in her first-round match against Miss Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, will attempt to gain revenge for the defeat Miss Harper inflicted on her in last year's semifinals.

Both Miss Dettweiler and Mrs. Meckley are playing first-class golf, and it would not be surprising to see an all-District finals.

Bad Putts Hurt.

Miss Dettweiler had some good and bad holes in her match with Mrs. Clark, winning the sixth and ninth holes with par golf to go even at the turn. Along the stretch they fought tooth-and-nail until the tall Congressional entrant, after 3-putting the fifteenth to permit Mrs. Clark to spare the match, finished brilliantly with wins on the sixteenth and seventeenth holes. Mrs. Clark had 3-putted the sixteenth for a 6, and failed to match Miss Dettweilers's birdie 4 on the seventeenth hole.

Miss Dettweiler and Mrs. Clark each scored 88.

Five 3-putt greens and some inaccurate approaching brought about Miss Faunce's defeat. On the third and sixth holes Miss Faunce meandered into traps and lost to Mrs. Morrow. On the seventh she hit another trap and then proceeded to 3-putt for a 7 and a loss. On the ninth, with a chance to win a hole, Miss Faunce 3-putted for a half in 4 with the Baltimorean.

With Mrs. Morrow 2 up, Miss Faunce 3-putted the tenth, losing with a 6 to 5. The District champion braced and shot 4, 4, 5, 1 under par, to become square with Mrs. Morrow at the fourteenth. Here Miss Faunce entered another trap, got her par 4, but lost to Mrs. Morrow's birdie 3 to become 1 down.

Birdie Is Life-Saver.

Miss Faunce balanced the scales by capturing the seventeenth with a birdie 4, as Mrs. Morrow's second fell short of the green.

They reached the eighteenth green nicely in 2 shots, with Miss Faunce 20 feet to the right of the pin, and Mrs. Morrow, 15 feet to the left. Mrs. Morrow was up close for her 4, and Miss Faunce 3-putted, missing her second putt from 5 feet by a hair's breadth.

Miss Faunce did the back side in

Paul Quits Dizzy On Baseball Tour

Weather, Money or His Wife May Have Been Cause

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Oct. 9.—Whether it was the weather, wealth or his wife's illness remained unclear tonight; but one thing was certain, Paul Dean, the younger, had abandoned a barnstorming baseball tour with his big brother, Dizzy.

Paul today anounced he was dissolving the Dean and Dean exhibition tour and Dizzy left for Dayton, Ohio, without him. Paul withdrew "mostly because of the weather." Later at Dayton George Barr, in charge of the tour, said Paul had dropped out because of his wife's illness, and would rejoin the tourists later.

Li'l brother, however, said Barr was a little too sure. "I'm undecided whether to join Diz again or not," he said, and indicated his wife's health had nothing to do with his separation from the rest of the barnstormers.

Ft. Myer Polo Team Bests War, 9-8

Third Cavalry Four Enter Tourney Finals After Speedy Contest.

By George Considine.

AIDED by a 5-goal handicap, the Third Cavalry quartet, of Fort Myer, upset the versatile War Department centaurs by a score of 9 to 8 yesterday at Potomac Field to gain the title round of the handicap polo tournament for the Chief of Cavalry's Cup. Col. Windham, No. 1 for War, carried off individual honors, clicking off 3 goals.

As they went into the fifth period, War Department was leading 7 to 6 and, judging by the way the Red, White and Blues had held sway so far, seemed a certain winner. Putting even more daylight between the teams Maj. C. C. Smith, riding No. 4, slapped one through to make it 8 to 6.

Everybody thought it wass just about over except Capt. Harry Stadler, No. 2 man for Third Cavalry, who started the ball rolling in more ways than one. Already the only Third Cavalryman to score, Capt. Stadler launched a stirring drive through enemy horsemen all the way down the field.

Finally having coaxed the ball into position, he brought the crowd to its feet with a beautiful whip, which sent it between the posts and once again gave confidence to his mates. Capt. Gene Harrison got the feel of the competition and tied the score at 8-all, just as the fifth period ended.

Indians Take It Easy In Football Practice

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 9 (AP).—Coach Tommy Dowler is giving the William and Mary Indians slight workouts for the early part of the week. Feeling that his squad needs a slight rest after three stiff games in a row, Coach Dowler yesterday held a dummy scrimmage and today's workout consisted of signal drills.

Pre-season injuries to Frank Livesay, Red Woodward and Wayne Harper kept them out of earlier games. They have returned to give the Indians full strength with the exception of Szumigala for Saturday.

Tarheels Fear Letdown in Md. Game

Coach Fights Against Slum After Near-Perfection in Tennessee Tilt.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Oct. 9.—Coach Carl Snavely fears a let-down among the Tarheel gridders, and, if such happens, North Carolina may find its nemesis in the powerful Terps from the University of Maryland.

Most teams after playing a "near perfect" game against a team for which they had pointed for weeks will find themselves growing stale and listless. For the good of the Tar Heels this can not afford to happen, for Maryland is booked as a hard tussle. It is unfortunate that the tough battle had to follow the Tennessee game.

Coach Snavely, however, is doing everything to avoid such a condition. He is working the men hard, on several occasions until after dark. Maryland plays are being drilled against thoroughly.

Carolina scouts said the Terps did not even begin to open up in the first two games, thus leaving their real power still under cover. On the other hand, Maryland scouts were able to get everything on the Tarheels from their notations on the Carolina-Vol game.

For the third straight week the Tarheels will have to concentrate on pass defense. Bill Guckeyson, star of the Terps, is ranked among the best tossers in Dixie. Maryland used only simple passes against V. P. I. and they worked. Coach Snavely is wondering how well the more deceptive pass formations will click. Carolina's pass defense was pretty fair against the Vols, but, ironically enough, both Tennessee scores came from passes.

U. S. Olympic Team Believed Certain After N. Y. Fight Fails

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—American participation in the 1936 Olympic games in Berlin appeared a definite prospect today following the failure of an opposition wing to put the Metropolitan District A. A. U. on record favoring a boycott.

The opposition, led by Charles Ornstein and strongly supported by Jeremiah T. Mahoney, president of the National A. A. U., met with a reverse when Ornstein's resolution urging nonparticipation was tabled by a 2½-to-1 vote among more than 100 delegates.

Persons close to the situation, the Associated Press was told, regarded the vote in favor of tabling the resolution as the turning point in favor of Olympic participation. They pointed out that the Metropolitan District A. A. U. has the largest and strongest Jewish and Catholic representation in the country.

While a bitter and protracted fight on the question is almost certain when the A. A. U.'s national convention is held here in December, the signs now seem to point definitely to final victory for proponents of American Olympic participation.

Another meeting of the metropolitan district's delegates will be called prior to the national convention, when a fresh attempt will be made to put the district on record one way or the other. Observers close to the situation, however, said failure even to defeat the motion to table Ornstein's resolution was tantamount to defeat of the resolution then or at any later date.

Boycott proponents were counting heavily on New York to fall in line with the New Jersey, Southern and South Atlantic A. A. U. districts, all of which are on record as opposed to participation. The Central and Midwestern districts held their preconvention meetings recently, but did not discuss the Olympic question. Thus their delegates will go to the convention uninstructed.

Sentiment in the Midwest, it was said, favors participation strongly.

Even if the A. A. U. should refuse to sanction American participation, the American Olympic committee, headed by Avery Brundage, former A. A. U. president, may go ahead with plans and arrange to send a team abroad.

In that case, the A. A. U., although opposed as a unit to participation, still might agree to certify American Olympic athletes, who otherwise would lose their amateur status in this country.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 9.—Miss Freda, blue-check hen, flying to the Hunter-Carmer loft, again proved her worth by capturing the final race of the series sponsored by the Algonquin Pigeon Flying Club. Flying through rain and snow and hampered by strong head winds, Miss Freda covered the 309 miles from Cincinnati, Ohio, in 9 hours flat.

Ann O'Ruley's Drive Wins at Suffolk

$17.50 Shot Is Victor by Neck Over Whopper in $5,000 Feature.

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Mass., Oct. 9.—Mrs. A. A. Baroni's Ann O'Ruley, fighting chestnut daughter of Man o' War, drove to a neck victory over the gigantic Whopper in the 11-16 miles of the Yankee Handicap, $5,000 feature race of the mid-week program, before 15,000 enthusiasts here today.

The Baroni color-bearer overhauled the favored Hal Price Headley colt at the wire, negotiating the distance in 1:45, to pay $17.40. Skip It tripped in a length behind Whopper, retaining show money from the driving C. V. Whitney filly, Pantfoule, that was badly placed in sixth place in the going down the back stretch, but improved rapidly under stout handling by the veteran Alfy Robertson.

Whopper Is Favorite.

Whopper went to the post an odds-on favorite at 3-5 and paid the short price of $2.60 for the place. The Headley colt folded under the double handicap of toting the heavy package of 124 pounds and reporting for the assignment sore, although he led the full distance until overtaken by the winner. Skip It returned $2.80 for show.

Happy Helen was a factor, running well in second position, until the field turned for home. Gov. Scholtz and Red Ensign would have none of the running.

Penn High Boys Win As Girls Are Defeated

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 9.—Pennsylvania Avenue High School's soccer team battled the Orange and Black of Central High School of Lonaconing to a scoreless tie yesterday on the Penn athletic field, but in the second game of the Western Maryland Interscholastic League double-header, Coach Gladys Jenkins' Central fieldball eleven nosed out the girls of the South End School, 10 to 8.

Central's field ball eleven reeled off 10 points in the first three periods and was leading Penn, 10 to 2, going into the final heat when Winnie Troutman scored 6 points on a field goal and 4 penalty goals, to put the Maroon and White only 2 points in the rear at the final whistle.

Gophers Due For Test at Nebraska

Minnesota, Alphonse Lost, in Danger of Being Upset.

Oregon, Yale, Colgate Among Big Teams Under Fire.

By Edward J. Neil.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The football campaign is only three weeks old, yet the turning point for several of the mightiest squads in the country, highly favored in pre-season predictions, looms as early as this Saturday.

There's the case of Minnesota, the mountainous Gophers, rated at least on a par last fall with Alabama's Rose Bowl champions, faced all of a sudden with the tremendous task of beating Dana Bible's Nebraska Corn Huskers in the top game on the national schedule. Despite the loss of such great backs as Pug Lund and Bull Kostka, Minnesota figured to rate right back up there again this year.

But now Al Alphonse, last of the Gopher ball-carrying stars who trimmed Pittsburgh in one of 1934's greatest battles, has been declared ineligible, and Minnesota was an ordinary looking team beating North Dakota State in its first start, 26 to 6. And Nebraska, rising to its old powerhouse heights, may be just the team to play Minnesota's steam roller role in the mid-West, with that fire-ball Half Back Lloyd Cardwell carrying the ball as Lund did last year. He was the best looking back of the year, scoring three touchdowns on Chicago, and in the 20-7 conquest of Iowa State.

Oregon to Test Bears.

The team that was labelled T. N. T.—Beware! by every coach on the Pacific Coast, Oregon, possible rival for Stanford as the Coast Conference champion and Rose Bowl candidate, runs into the most improved team out there, California, conquerors of Slip Madigan's St. Mary's Gaels, 10 to 0, last Saturday. There, too, great hopes may come to a sudden end and new ambitions take lofty flight.

In the South this new power at Auburn, victor over Tulane, 10 to 0, meets an aroused Tennessee eleven that took an astonishing 38-to-13 whipping from Carl Snavely's winging North Carolinians.

Another of Andy Kerr's always tricky and dangerous Colgate teams, perhaps his best since the undefeated, untied, unscored upon, uninvited eleven of 1933, faces the crossroads of Rose Bowl hopes again far earlier than expected against Iowa's Speed Demons, headed by the Negro flash, Ossie Simmons, and bone-busting Dick Crayne.

Yale to Oppose Penn.

Most interesting of all the Eastern duels brings Yale, climbing steadily back to football's top stand, against the most powerful Pennsylvania team in years, a massive array that had the Princeton Tigers beaten for three quarters before losing finally, 7 to 6.

The husky machine Jim Crowley has molded at Fordham meets its first big test in Purdue, 7-to-0 conqueror of Northwestern. Dick Harlow's new regime at Harvard comes under heavy pressure for the first time against Holy Cross, one of the most dangerous-looking squads in the East. At New York University, where Dr. Mal Stevens, former Yale head coach, is staging a comeback, Carnegie Tech, unexpectedly tough for Notre Dame,

Princeton—Its All-Time Honor Roll

Slagle in Back Field With King, Ames and McCormick.

By George Trevor,

Nationally Known Football Authority.

WHILE the Tiger stands defender of the Orange and Black, these unforgettable names will be handed down from Princeton father to Princeton son. Since the day in 1873 when old Nassau and Rutgers met in the first American football match, Princeton has played a leading role in the gridiron saga. Big Ed McMillan, blond whirlwind of the 1925 line, gets the all-time call at center over such Homeric pivots as Gailey, George Bluethenthal, Genert, Balliet, Callahan and last, but not least Mose Kalbaugh, of recent renown. Lethargic as a sophomore, McMillan found himself in junior year and blasted the Yale and Harvard defenses with his devastating charge.

Princeton has produced three super-guards—John DeWitt, Beef Wheeler and Jesse Riggs. DeWitt, built like the bole of an oak tree, had the tenacity of his Dutch ancestors. He beat a stronger Yale team in 1903 by blocking a kick, running 60 yards for a touchdown and later making a 43-yard goal from placement. An iron martinet as captain, DeWitt was a rough and tumble scrapper who could take it and give it. His leonine head swathed in a white bandage shone in the melee like the plume of Navarre.

Riggs is remembered as the only guard ever to fight a stalemate with

Smith Rides Repeal to Victory; Daily Double Pays $17.40.

front and then won as Jockey Fallon pleased.

The daily double resulted in victories for a pair of favorites, Wise Count and Repeal, and a small army of betters went back under the stands to collect $17.40.

Wise Count gave the favorite players a good start by winning the first race at a $4.70 mutuel. With the apprentice rider, Les Garrett, in the saddle, Wise Count moved up when called upon and easily disposed of Grace Bunting and Curling.

Ina Dear Is Winner.

Ina Dear also walked the chalk mark with heavy betting on her back. The daughter of Rip Rap ran a ripping race and was never headed after the first 25 yards. Freddie Faust, the Washington boy, kept hustling the filly every inch of the way. Dixie Dora was second after pressing the race and Jack Patches, despite a rough trip, was third. Ina Dear paid $5.90.

Eddie Smith, the Capital jockey who was thrown last week when the horse, Callitaday, broke a leg, rode his father's Repeal to victory in the third race. Again the favorite was the winner. Bull Fighter was second and Miss Alphonso third in the field of nine. Repeal was allowed to settle into his best stride and then came with a rush at the end to pay $5.20.

Scotch Bun, a hot paddock tip, made good in the fourth race at a $15.60 mutuel. Breaking from the outside, Scotch Bun gained steadily through the running and passed the leaders at the eighth pole to draw away to an easy win. Celebrant did a lot of running, but was forced into second money. Gala Dame, the early pace-setter, was third.

Glastonbury Triumphs.

Glastonbury, one that could hardly get out of his own way in his last effort at Laurel, proved a different horse at a $14.40 mutuel. With Freddie Faust riding, Glastonbury showed a game effort and won a nose decision from Blessed Again. Cross Ruff tired from setting the pace and was third.

Play Book led all the way to win the final and pay $25.70.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE COUNT, $4.70, $3.30, $2.70; GRACE BUNTING, $5.70, $3.90; CURLING, $10.00.

WISE COUNT, away in the first flight and racing stoutly, displaced TODY CON when leaving the back stretch, moved clear at the stretch turn, but had to be kept under pressure to withstand GRACE BUNTING. The latter, strongly handled from the beginning, responded to punishment and closed willingly after reaching the home stretch. CURLING went prominently and held on gamely for the closing drive. TODY CON was stoutly handled and raced well. LOVE LOST went forwardly and raced in tight quarters most of the trip. PLAIN ACE met with interference midway of the back stretch. MIGHTY ATOM lacked speed at all stages.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:16. Off at 2:20. Winner, Mrs. L. H. Nimkoff's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INA DEAR, $5.90, $3.50, $2.70; DIXIE DORA, $3.90, $3.30; JACK PATCHES, $17.50.

INA DEAR rushed to the front after breaking forwardly, displayed nice speed to shake off MERRIWEATHER, saved ground while setting a fast pace and outstayed DIXIE DORA under strong urging. DIXIE DORA, in the thick of contention, swung to the outside entering the home stretch and closed fast under punishment. JACK PATCHES, away slowly and shuffled back when attempting to move up on the inside at the elbow, came between horses and closed with a tremendous rush. He may have been the best. SCUDDER moved up strongly at the stretch turn, but hung in the final drive. EVENING HOUR improved her position slowly. BULLFINCH lacked racing room in the early racing. FAR CRY failed to rally when the real test came. MOTTLED was unable to enter contention. IN FRONT lost ground throughout. SIR WINDSOR displayed early foot.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:50. Off at 2:53½. Winner, E. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—REPEAL, $5.20, $3.40, $2.60; BULL FIGHTER, $3.00, $3.70; MISS ALPHONSO, $13.50.

REPEAL, shuffled back going to the first turn, went to the outside when bettering his position, responding nicely after reaching the home stretch to wear down BULL FIGHTER, then came out slowly. BULL FIGHTER, hard ridden from the start, slipped through on the inside to gain command midway of the last turn, saved ground, but weakened in the final furlong. MISS ALPHONSO, outran for the first six furlongs, improved her position steadily and finished with excellent courage. OUR SHIP, rated forwardly, weakened after making a determined bid midway of the final curve. BRIGHT SPIRITS was raced wide for the entire journey. SCOTTY DON and BARNEY SEXTON were raced into submission making the early pace.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:21. Off at 3:21½. Winner, S. S. Sand's ch. g. (3), by Colin—Patisserie. Trained by T. Bonham. Value to winner, $675; second, $125; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:14 1-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:44 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCOTCH BUN, $15.60, $9.90, $4.30; CELEBRANT, $9.20, $4.10; GALA DAME, $2.40.

SCOTCH BUN, in fine form and racing forwardly placed on the outside of the leaders, moved up fast to wear down GALA DAME, who swerved to the inside after gaining command and drew out as if much the best. CELEBRANT, well placed and going strongly, closed on with determination for the closing test, but was no match for the winner. GALA DAME, rushed hard to take command, saved ground, but could not stay when challenged. FIPE AND DRUM, a slow beginner, passed tiring horses. HOT GRIDDLE could not reach contention. DARK WHISK was never a factor. CAPABLANCA was never dangerous. RED PETEE and RED VELVET stopped.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Springsteel. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-olds. Foaled in Maryland. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; driving. Went to post at 3:52. Off at 3:53½. Winner, A. G. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPEED TO SPARE, $2.80, $2.20, $2.10; BALCONY, $2.20, $2.10; THE HARE, $3.10.

SPEED TO SPARE, quick to get going, moved clear after resisting early contention from BALCONY, opened up a winning lead when straightened into the home stretch, then came out without effort approaching the finish. BALCONY, in closest attendance of the winner from the beginning, began tiring after reaching the home stretch and was under punishment to withstand THE HARE. The latter, forced to race on the outside while working his way into contention, was carried wide at the stretch turn, but closed stoutly when straightened out. CLEVER GIRL went wide throughout. She closed in game fashion. UGIN was in close quarters numerously the home stretch and failed to rally. CHERRYSTONE weakened after five furlongs.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:25. Off at 4:25½. Winner, J. McPherson's ch. c. (3), by Sir Gallahad III—Bignonia. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $675; second, $125; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:48 4-5, 1:14, 1:39 4-5, 1:46 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GLASTONBURY, $14.40, $7.50, $3.70; BLESSED AGAIN, $5.20, $2.80; CROSS RUFF $2.40.

GLASTONBURY, reserved back of the leaders until well settled in his stride, swung to the outside when entering contention, then closing in bold fashion after engaging the leaders in the last furlong, was up in the concluding strides. BLESSED AGAIN, kept forwardly placed in the early stages, reached CROSS RUFF into defeat but could not resist the winner. CROSS RUFF, a keen factor, had a lot taken out of him racing ROUGH PLAYER into defeat and he weakened after gaining a slight lead in the final furlong. XANDRA raced within striking distance of the leaders, but was not good enough. ROUGH PLAYER began tiring in the last five-sixteenths.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:55. Off at 4:56. Winner, C. McCarthy's b. g. (3), by Bookbinder—Snakebite. Trained by Keiger. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:39 1-4, 1:46 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLAY BOOK, $25.70, $11.00, $5.80; SPARKY, $4.80, $2.60; WISE ADVOCATE, $2.50.

PLAY BOOK outran his field to the first turn, opened up a commanding lead when straightened away on the back stretch, saved ground thereafter, but had to be shaken up strongly in the last furlong to stave off SPARKY. The latter worked his way up on the outside and closed full of run. WISE ADVOCATE, slower than usual to get off in his stride, passed tiring horses in the last half-mile. DUNAIR, well placed under stout handling for the entire trip, could not threaten. ATTRIBUTE, taken up rather steadily going to the first turn and permitted to drop far out of contention, closed a good gap. PETEE BLUE weakened badly when the real test came. MISS SNOW raced in dull fashion. TELL IT stopped.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat Off.

STRANGE as it seems, if the 92 elements that make up all matter on earth are arranged in order of their atomic number—hydrogen, the lightest, first, and so on through uranium, the heaviest—the list will be found to have definitely reoccuring chemical and physical properties.

Eight spaces after lithium comes sodium, and eight spaces after sodium comes potassium—all three having physical and chemical properties in common. Between them, however, lie such unrelated elements as carbon, aluminum and sulphur.

This strange fact was recognized by scientists long ago. They arranged the elements into table form to show the reoccurrence of properties.

The Russian scientist, Mendelyeev, first proposed the periodic law of elements, in 1869. Working on this theory, he was able to announce the existence of, and describe the properties of five different unknown elements. There seemed to be an element missing between calcium and titanium—so Mendelyeev put one there and called it eka-boron. He even described it. In 1879 this missing element was discovered and called scandium. Mendelyeev also described and predicted the discovery of other missing elements that he called eka-aluminum, eka-silicon, eka-manganese and dwi-manganese. He was borne out by the discovery of gallium, germanium, masurium and rhenium.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Harsh Words — By Harry J. Tuthill

Of all the harum-scarum stories you ever told me, this one about a week-end visit to the year 9324 is the worst.
Not 9324. It was only 7324.
Oh darling, what's a few thousand years more or less in a yarn like yours?
I'll never forget how my head whirled, when you walked in with that mogul at your heels, and talked as if you had been gone for years.
The moment I laid eyes on that mogul, I knew I was in for something.
Ha! But I'll admit I didn't even suspect it would be anything like this 9324 business.
Heavenly days! Imagine a man coming home to tell his wife he had been camping on the moon.
Well anyhow, it all happened. And from what I remember on that trip, I'd say the moon was just a place where that rocket slowed down to 300 miles an hour going around a curve.
